VI. Dictionary (Kāshmīrī and English) 1

VII. Addenda 1243

VIII. Corrigenda 1249

I have numbered the entries in the slip for convenience of reference. In (1) the letter प indicates that the word is masculine. The rest of the entry and the whole of (2) and (3) belong more or less to the original materials, and (4) was added by the Paṇḍit. From this I prepared the article in the Dictionary. I inserted the transliteration in (1), retained the Sanskrit synonym in (2), abandoned, as surplusage, the Hindī synonym in (3), and translated the substance of (2) and (4) into English. The article thus took the following form:—

āb-ḍāb, आब्-डाब्। अपथ्यसेवनम् m. giving unwholesome food or drugs to an invalid.

To the entries thus prepared by the Paṇḍits I have added numerous words and meanings collected by myself in the course of my reading. As my authority on the subject is small, I always give in each case a reference to the source from which the word or meaning was obtained. Articles that depend entirely on my own authority can be distinguished from those based on the Paṇḍits' slips by the fact that the latter, and the latter only, have a Sanskrit synonym following the Kāshmīrī word.

The principal sources other than the Paṇḍits' slips have been indexes of words occurring in all the Kāshmīrī texts that are known to me. Amongst them are: (1) the Lallā-vākyāni, a collection of songs by the celebrated Lāl Dēd (L.V., quoted by verse-number) edited by Dr. L. Barnett and myself for the Royal Asiatic Society, and the following edited by myself alone: (2) Kṛṣṇa Rāzdān's Śiva-pariṇaya (Śiv., similarly quoted), (3) Divâkara Prakāśa Bhaṭṭa's Śrīrāmâvatāra-carita (Rām., similarly quoted), (4) Dīna-nātha's Śrīkṛṣṇâvatāra-līlā (K., similarly quoted), all published in the Bibliotheca Indica, and (5) Hātim's Songs and Tales, a valuable collection of folk-tales, etc., in village Kāshmīrī made by Sir Aurel Stein and edited and translated by me (H., quoted by number and paragraph, London, 1923). One other text was (6) Burkhard's edition of Maḥmūd Gāmī's Yūsuf Zulaikhā, published in vols. xlix and liii of the Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft (YZ., quoted by verse-number), an excellent example of Kāshmīrī poetry as written by Musalmāns. To these should be added (7) Dr. Hinton Knowles' Dictionary of Kashmiri Proverbs and Sayings (K.Pr., quoted by page), (8) Mr. Wade's Kāshmīrī Grammar (W., quoted by page), (9) my edition of Īśvara Kaula's Kaśmīraśabdâmṛta (I.K., quoted by sūtra), published by the Asiatic Society of Bengal, (10) my own Essays on Kāçmīrī Grammar (Gr.Gr., quoted by page), and (11) Sir Walter Lawrence's Valley of Kashmir (L., quoted by page). I have also included all the words found in Elmslie's Vocabulary of the Kashmírí Language (El.), and in the Vocabulary appended to my own Kāshmīrī Manual (Gr.M.) published by the Clarendon Press in 1912.

Of the above, Nos. (1) to (5) were, when I began writing the Dictionary, available only in manuscripts carefully prepared under my instruction. Since then they have all been printed, and precautions have been taken to secure that the texts of the manuscripts and of the printed editions should agree in every particular. I hope that I have included in the Dictionary every Kāshmīrī word occurring in these. In the earlier pages I did not give references to every occurrence in each of them, contenting myself with quoting what I considered to be typical instances; but, as the work progressed, I found it advisable to be more liberal in my references, and, save in the case of the most common words, I have quoted practically every occurrence. I may here note that there appeared in Kashmir in 1913 an edition of the Śrīrāmâvatāra-carita (No. (3) above) printed in the Persian character. In order to facilitate reference to it, I give below on pp. xvii ff. a Concordance to it and to my edition in the Bibliotheca Indica.

Kāshmīrī, especially as spoken by Musalmāns, borrows freely from Persian, and (through Persian) from Arabic. In works written by Musalmāns, such as the Yūsuf Zulaikhā above mentioned, there are whole passages of which the vocabulary is really more Persian than Kāshmīrī, strings of nouns and adjectives taken from the former language being merely held together by some verb belonging to the latter. In fact, such Kāshmīrī is an exact counterpart of the high literary Urdū fashionable a generation ago in Lucknow. To have included all such Persian words in this Dictionary would have uselessly increased the bulk of the work, and have given little help to the student. Such words will be found in any good Hindōstānī Dictionary, and it is not probable that any person will study Kāshmīrī who has not a certain acquaintance either with that language or with Persian. I have therefore endeavoured to admit to the pages of this Dictionary only such Persian words as are in general use by all classes, and I have been strict even in regard to them. I have included all Persian words registered by my Paṇḍits, and also all those to be found in the Proverbs contained in Dr. Hinton Knowles' book, as well as in the vocabularies already mentioned, and I believe that this will be found to give a very fair selection. On the other hand, there are no doubt hundreds of Persian and Arabic words in such poems as the Yūsuf Zulaikhā, which will not be found in the following pages.

Kāshmīrīs use three alphabets for writing their language. Hindūs as a rule employ either the Śāradā or the Nāgarī character, and Musalmāns the Persian. The spelling of Kāshmīrī words written in the Persian character has the advantage of being fairly constant, but the alphabet is quite unsuited for illustrating the complicated vowel sounds of the language. I have therefore decided not to use it except in the case of words borrowed from Persian. Even such words, when forming part of the Hindū vocabulary, and evidenced as such by being included in the Pandits' slips, are also written in Nāgarī. As for the Śāradā character, no types are available, nor, as a rule, are European students familiar with it, and I have therefore written all words not purely Musalmān in Nāgarī. But in this case another difficulty has arisen. No two Hindūs spell Kāshmīrī alike in that form of script. Every man is a law unto himself. I have in my possession two Nāgarī manuscripts of the same work—the Śiva Pariṇaya; and as an example of the various modes of spelling I here give the same passage transcribed from each.

MS. A. इन्द्राज़स् व्यलि खंतु अन्धकारो । ज़ोरनति गोस् लूरपारयो ॥
MS. B. इन्द्राजस इलि खुत् अन्द्कार । जुरन्ति गुस लोरपारयु ॥

MS. A. स्वकलाव् थन कुख च्ह बवच्यनहारो । महागणपत ध्यान दारयो ॥
MS. B. मुक्लाव् तन क्योख् चूह भखच्यनहार । महागणपत ध्यान दारयु ॥

Now a dictionary must follow one system of spelling throughout, and I have, accordingly, in the present work followed, with one or two slight alterations, that of Īśvara Kaula, the best and most logical of all those used for Kāshmīrī. But it is obvious that, however excellent its system of spelling may be, a dictionary that follows the conventional order of the Nāgarī alphabet will be of little use to the student of works that diverge so widely from the standard as does MS. B. Twelve out of the fifteen words given in the extract would not be found in their proper places, and would have to be searched for under another orthography. It will be observed from a comparison of the two extracts that most of the variations occur in the representation of vowel sounds. Consonantal variations are few, and can easily be made subject to one or two general rules. This is true of all systems. After much consideration and many experiments, I therefore decided, as the most practical course, to make the romanized transliteration the basis of the alphabetical order, and to arrange the words in the approximate order of the English consonants, without any regard to the vowels. Thus, whether a word is spelt kōmᵘ, kom, kāmu, kömᵘ, or kạ̄mi, it will occupy the same place in the Dictionary, its place being determined by the k and the m and by nothing else. Only in those cases in which several words have all the same consonants, and differ only in their vocalization, will the order of the vowels be taken into account. As regards words beginning with vowels, these are all grouped together at the beginning, the order in the group being determined by the consonants. Then will follow all words beginning with b, then those beginning with c, and so on. In order to serve as a check against misprints, after every Kāshmīrī word in the roman character, I have given it again either in the Nāgarī character, according to the spelling of Īśvara Kaula, or, in the case of words directly borrowed from Persian, in the Persian character. This is usually followed by its Sanskrit translation and then by its meaning in English.

The following is the order of the vowels when appearing in different words of which the consonantal skeleton is the same: ᵃ, ᵃ̈, a, ạ, ȧ, ā; ai; au; ᵉ, e, ẹ, ė, ē; ⁱ, i, ị; ᵒ, o, ọ, ȯ, ō, o, ō, ȯ, ö; ᵘ, u, ū, ᵘ̈, ü, ṻ.[1] Anunāsika is represented by ˜, and does not affect the order of words. Anusvāra si represented by m or n according to pronunciation. The Sanskrit vowels ṛu (ऋ) and ṛĕ (modified ऋ) are arranged (in the forms, respectively, of ru and rĕ) among consonants under r, with which, in writing, they are quite commonly confounded.

The following is the order of the consonants: b, c (ch), d and ḍ, f, g, h, j, k (kh), l, m, n, ñ, p (ph), r, s (sh), t (th) and ṭ (ṭh), ʦ (ʦh), v (or w), y, z. But the following points must be noted. The aspirates ch, kh, ph, th, and ṭh, and also the sibilant sh, appear in their English alphabetical order. Thus ch comes between cg and cj, and sh between sg and sj (vowels being neglected as usual). I would draw especial attention to this, as I find that some who have consulted the Dictionary have been misled by failing to remember that, in the case of ch, kh, ph, sh, ʦh, ṭh, and ʃh, for the purposes of English alphabetical sequence, these respective groups have each been dissolved into its component typographical parts, and are not to be considered as so many single letters, as in the Nāgarī छ्, ख्, फ्, ष्, ʦ्, ठ्, and क्ष् respectively.

[1] It will be observed that these are separated into groups, each separated by a semicolon. I must confess that, when the consonantal framework of a number of words has been the same, I have not always exactly followed the order of the vowels within each group, being sometimes led to disregard that by practical questions of convenience of reference. This will not, I hope, give rise to any serious misapprehension.

The letter n represents the Arabic ں and the Nāgarī न्. It also represents (in Kāshmīrī words) the Nāgarī ङ्, ञ्, and ण्, when these are compounded with another consonant of the same class. Thus, ङ्ग nga, ञ्च nca, ण्ट nṭa. The letters ङ and ण occur in Kāshmīrī only in such circumstances. They never, except in paṇḍits' 'learned' spelling, stand alone. In quoting Sanskrit words the usual transliteration (ṅa, ña, and ṇa) is, of course, observed. When the Nāgarī letter ञ् stands alone in a Kāshmīrī word it has nearly the sound of ny, and is represented in the Persian character by ۑ. In this Dictionary it is represented by ñ, as in ञॅञ běñě. This ñ is not classed for purposes of alphabetical order with n, but comes after it as a distinct letter. This is rendered necessary by the fact that many people actually represent ñ by ny, and to class it with n would cause great confusion. On the other hand, for the purpose of alphabetical order, d and ḍ are classed as the same letter, and so are t (including th) and ṭ (including ṭh). The letters v and w are for the purpose of alphabetical order treated as the same letter.

The letter sh represents the Persian ش, and also two distinct Nāgarī (or Śāradā) letters, viz. श् and ष्. Of the two latter, ष् is merely a grammarian's figment, used by some paṇḍits in writing words derived from Sanskrit words containing it. Thus such persons write pōsh, a flower, पोष्, not पोश्, because it is derived from पुष्प. In Kāshmīrī श् and ष् are both pronounced sh, as in 'shine', and there is no danger in representing them both in the roman character by sh, as the Nāgarī spelling is also given in every case. To write ś and ṣ would only puzzle those who read texts edited on the usual system of representing the sound by sh. In transliterating Sanskrit words, I of course retain the customary ś and ṣ.

The character ʦ is an innovation. It represents the affricative sound of c represented in Nāgarī by च and in the Persian character by چ, which is very common in Kāshmīrī and other languages of North-Western India. I have introduced the character ʦ in order to show that in the vernacular character the sound is represented by one letter, and also to distinguish it from ts (त्स, تس), an altogether different sound. Its aspirated form is ʦh, which is sounded as ts + ह, not as t + sh.

Such omissions as have suggested themselves after the completion of the work and all errata observed in the course of printing are added at the end under the heads of 'Addenda' and 'Corrigenda' respectively.

I must conclude with an expression of grateful thanks to those to whom I am indebted. First of all, I must name Dr. Ernest Neve and Dr. H. E. Rawlence of the Kashmīr C.M.S. Hospital who often gave me generous help on doubtful points submitted to them. I fear that not seldom I must have interrupted one or other in the midst of far more important tasks, but they never allowed me to feel that I was imposing on their inexhaustible kindness. Again, to Professor Sten Konow, of Oslo, and to Dr. L. Barnett, of the British Museum, I am under heavy obligations for the unvarying friendship with which they helped me in the correction of proofs, and in the elucidation of obscurities in the Sanskrit of the Paṇḍits' explanations.

I also owe a heavy debt of gratitude to Professor Nityânanda Śāstrī of the Śrī Pratāp College, Śrīnagar, for much help in explaining difficult points in Kāshmīrī idiom and meaning that baffled my unaided knowledge. After the death of my Assistant, Mahāmahôpâdhyāya Mukunda Rāma Śāstrī, this gentleman placed all the resources of his great learning at my disposal. He even wrote for me a commentary on an ancient Kāshmīrī work—the Mahā-naya-prakāśa—which I found most valuable in elucidating the history of the language.[1]

By the regretted death of Mahāmahôpâdhyāya Mukunda Rāma Śāstrī, I lost a valuable coadjutor, possessed of a unique knowledge of his native language in all its forms, ancient and modern. It was with him that I began my studies of Kāshmīrī, when at the end of the last century he came to me in the hot plains of Patna, and spent there many months far from his native land of mountain and snow. After his return home, for more than twenty years, he helped me in editing Kāshmīrī texts and in the preparation of this dictionary, and before I lost his services he had completed the last slips upon which the latter has been based. It is with genuine sorrow that I recognize that he did not live to see the completed sheets of the work on which he spent such fruitful labour.

GRAMMATICAL NOMENCLATURE

As Kāshmīrī grammars differ in the nomenclature of the various forms of the parts of speech, I give below a series of tables of the declension and conjugation of the language showing the names adopted in the following pages for each form. The names are those employed in my Kāshmīrī Manual, to which reference should be made for further particulars. In grammars of allied forms of speech it is customary to make out, with the help of postpositions, a long array of cases for the nouns, but here this is quite unnecessary. The Kāshmīrī noun has only four cases, the nominative, the dative, the agent, and the ablative, and other relations are indicated by postpositions or prepositions governing one or other of the three latter.[1] When a noun presents any peculiarities I have endeavoured to show them so far as my knowledge extended. As all nouns of the first and second declensions are masculine, and all those of the third and fourth declensions are feminine, it has not been necessary to state the declension of any noun as well as its gender. The grammars teach that the second declension consists of all masculine nouns in ᵘ-mātrā, and the third of all feminine nouns in ᵎ-mātrā or ᵘ-mātrā. The first and fourth include all the rest. Adjectives, whose nominatives masculine end in ᵘ-mātrā, are declinable, and others are, as a rule, indeclinable. This being a general law, it has not been considered advisable to waste space by stating the fact in each case. When an adjective is declinable its feminine is recorded unless this is quite regular. An adjective used as a substantive is declined as such. In the case of verbs I usually show their first and second past participles, or, in the case of verbs of the third conjugation, their second past participles only, and also any other irregular or difficult forms. The information regarding the feminines of adjectives comes from the Paṇḍits' slips. For the rest I am myself responsible. Īśvara Kaula's Kaśmīra-śabdâmṛta has been my authority in all doubtful cases.

[1] In the tables of the noun I have shown the genitive as an additional case. Really, for this case, there are two postpositions, sondᵘ (or hondᵘ), which governs the dative, and ukᵘ, which governs the ablative. As there are irregularities in suffixing these postpositions, I have included them merely for the sake of convenience, and to distinguish between the animate and inanimate masculine genitive.

PRONOUNS

A. Personal.

1. bŏh, I.
2. tˢh, thou.
3. suh, sa, tih, he, she, it.

B. Possessive.

1. myônᵘ, my; sônᵘ, our.
2. chyônᵘ, thy; tuhondᵘ, your.
3. támⁱ-sondᵘ, tasondᵘ, tas, his, hers; tamyukᵘ, its; timan-hondᵘ, tihondᵘ, their.

C. Demonstrative.

Proximate. yih, this.
Mediate. huh, hŏh, that (within sight).
Remote. suh, sa, tih, that (not within sight).

D. Relative. yus, yŏssa, yih, who, which, what.

E. Interrogative. kus? kŏssa? kyāh? who? which? what?

F. Indefinite. kūh, kūtshāh, kāh, kātshāh, anyone, some one; kēh, kētshāh, anything, something.

G. Reflexive. pān, self.

CONJUGATION OF VERBS

First Conjugation: All Transitive and Impersonal Verbs; e.g. karun, to make.
Second Conjugation: About sixty-five Intransitive Verbs; e.g. bŏvun, to become.
Third Conjugation: All other Intransitive Verbs; e g. wuphun, to fly.

A. FORMS COMMON TO ALL THREE CONJUGATIONS

Examples given only of the First Conjugation.

Root. KAR, make.
Infinitive. Masculine, karun, karunᵘ, or karonᵘ; feminine, karüñᵘ; to make, the act of making.
Present Participle. karān, making.
Future Passive Participle. karun, karunᵘ, or karonᵘ, about to be made, meet to be made.
Impersonal Future Participle. karanī, it is to be made.
Conjunctive Participle. karith, having made.
Negative Conjunctive Participle. karanay, not having made.
Frequentative Participle. kárⁱ kárⁱ, making repeatedly.
Adverbial Participle. karönⁱ, while making.
Nouns of Agency. 1 karawunᵘ, 2 karanwôlᵘ, a maker, one who makes.

Indicative

Present. bŏh chus karān, I am making, I make.
Imperfect. bŏh ôsus karān, I was making.
Future bŏh kara, I shall make (also used as Present Indicative and as Present Conditional).
Durative Future. bŏh āsa karān, I shall be making.

CONDITIONAL.

Present. bŏh kara, I may make, (if) I make.
Future. bŏh āsa karān, (if) I be making.
Past. bŏh karahö, (if) I had made, I should have made (if).
Durative Past. bŏh āsahö karān, (if) I had been making, I should have been making (if).

IMPERATIVE.

Present. kar, make thou!
Polite. karta, please make!
Future. kàr^{i}zi, thou shouldst make!
Past. kàr^{i}zihē, thou shouldst have made!
Durative. ās karān, keep thou making, make thou a practice of making!

BENEDICTIVE. karĕkh, mayst thou make!

The nasalization indicated in the Nāgarī character by anunāsika (◌ँ) is represented in the roman character by the sign ~ over the nasalized vowel. Thus आँ ā̃, and so on. This does not affect the alphabetical order. Anusvāra (◌ं) is represented by m or n according to its sound. In Kāshmīrī words it occurs only as a compendium scripturæ for a nasal before a consonant of the same class. Thus, मंडु for मण्डु mǫ̈ṇḍᵘ.

As regards consonants generally, the virāma has been omitted in the second column to avoid typographical complications. Kāshmirī has no aspirated sonants (gh, jh, ḍh, dh, or bh). The only consonants that it possesses which are strange to the Nāgarī alphabet are the affricatives, ज़ tsa, छ tsha, and ज़ za. Their corresponding nasal is न na; thus, न्ट्स ntsa, न्छ ntsha, and न्ज़ nza; but when, according to the laws of phonetic mutation, dentals are changed to affricatives, the dental न na is changed to the palatal ञ ña, which some native scribes then write as ञ्. The Sanskrit vowel ऋ ṛ occurs only in words written by paṇḍits, and directly borrowed by them from that language. In Kāshmirī it always becomes ru or (when epenthetically modified) rĕ. Hence, in this dictionary, it is, for purposes of alphabetical sequence, treated as identical with ru, rĕ, under the consonant r. The Arabic 'ain (ع) is always dropped in words borrowed by Kāshmirī, though retained in writing when the Persian character is employed, as in عُذر, عَرض above.

Verbs whose roots end in consonants are quoted in the infinitive in un. The few verbs whose roots end in vowels are quoted in the infinitive in nu. They are as follows: khyonu ख्यनु, to eat, cyonu च्यनु, to drink; hyonu ह्यनु, to take; pyonu प्यनु, to fall; ʒyonu ज़्यनु, to be born; dyunu दिनु, to give, nyunu निनु, to take; and yunu यिनु, to come.

The verb substantive is quoted under chuh छुह, the pres. masc. sg. 3.

CONCORDANCE TO THE TWO VERSIONS OF THE ŚRĪ-RĀMÂVATĀRA-CARITA

So far as I can ascertain, no complete manuscript copy of the Śrī-Rāmâvatāra-carita of Divâkara Prakāśa Bhaṭṭa exists in Kashmīr. My edition, published in the Bibliotheca Indica, is a compilation of different sections, gathered together in manuscript from various quarters. While this dictionary was in course of publication, another edition of the poem, collected in the same way, was printed in the Persian character at the Kashmīr Pratāb Steam Press in Śrīnagar (1913). It naturally differs considerably in the order of the verses, and to a certain extent in the order of the subject matter, from my text which is that to which reference is made in this dictionary. On the other hand, making due allowance for this, the wording closely agrees in the two versions. For convenience of reference, I here give a concordance, showing the page and line of the Śrīnagar edition that correspond to each verse in that of the Bibliotheca Indica.

A DICTIONARY
KASHMIRI AND ENGLISH

WORDS COMMENCING WITH VOWELS

ᵃ. This vowel (a-mātrā), which also occurs in P"shtō and other languages of the North-West Frontier, is pronounced as an extremely short a. It never begins a word. In the Nāgarī and Śāradā characters it is not represented at all, the consonants between which it occurs being compounded into one character. Thus, the word tᵃh, thou, is written त्ह, literatim t-h, as if with no vowel. In the printed text of the Kaśmura-śabdâmṛta it is represented by virāma, thus त्‌ह. In the Persian character it is represented by zabar, thus حَ.

This vowel occurs under two sets of circumstances. In the first it is an original vowel, inherent in the word in which it occurs, and in such cases it modifies the vowel of the preceding syllable, if any, and if that vowel is liable to modification. Thus, a followed by ᵃ becomes ạ, ā becomes ö, ē becomes ī, ō becomes ū, and so on. Examples will be found under the respective vowels. In the second set of circumstances ᵃ is not original, but is merely a helping vowel inserted between the members of an original compound consonant to make the pronunciation more easy (what Sanskrit grammarians call svarabhakti). In such a case a preceding vowel is not modified. Thus the Sanskrit word शस्त्र śastra, iron, becomes in Kāshmīrī शस्तर, شَسْتَر, shĕstᵃr, and the Arabic word جلد, jald, active, becomes जल्द jald, or जलद jalᵃd, quickly. As in the latter case, the insertion of this ᵃ is often optional and depends upon the personal equation of the speaker.

Every final a in the language is pronounced very shortly, as if it were ᵃ, but this distinction is not marked in writing, nor is the preceding vowel affected by it.

ᵃ́. This vowel bears the same relation to ᵃ that á does to a (see á). When ᵃ is followed by ⁱ it becomes ᵃ́. Like the ᵃ it is omitted in the Nāgarī character. In the Persian character it is represented by zabar. Thus, from अन्दर, اَندَر, andᵃra, from inside, we have अन्द्रि, اَندْرِ, ạndᵃrⁱ. It is sounded like an extremely short á.

a 1. This is the usual short a of Hindī and other Indian languages, sounded like the a in 'America'. It is represented by अ in Nāgarī, and by zabar in the Persian character. When followed by ᵃ it becomes ạ, when followed by ⁱ it becomes á, when followed by ᵘ it becomes o, and when followed by ᵘ̈ it becomes ü.

When ya is initial or follows a vowel it becomes yĕ, and when it immediately follows another consonant it becomes ĕ, and so also does a when it follows ñ or sh. Thus, यमिस yĕmis, not yamis, बिय biyĕ, not biya, while पोथ्य pothya, books, becomes pōthĕ, म्याञ myāña, mine (fem. plur.), becomes myāñĕ, and निश nisha, near, becomes nishĕ. Similarly, also sometimes after c, ch, and j, as explained under the article ĕ.

Similarly, when wa immediately follows another consonant it becomes ŏ. Thus, dwad, milk, becomes dŏd.

The vowel a at the end of a word is always pronounced as ᵃ; but, the rule being universal, it is not customary to indicate the fact in writing.

In monosyllabic words ending in an aspirated consonant a has the sound of the a in 'hat', as in krakh, a noise.

a 2. An interjectional suffix used by a woman when addressing a man or woman who is a familiar or a junior. Thus, hatabā kāk-a, O father (familiarly), hatau Gana (for Gana + a), O Gana. When a woman addresses a man or a woman by his or her proper name we may use -a bāyĕ or -a bāyau. Thus, hatabā Mahādēv-a bāyĕ, hatabā Mahādēv-a bayau, or hatau Mahādēv-a bāyau, O Mahādēv. This cannot be used with words which are not proper names. We cannot say hatabā kāk-a bāyĕ, O father.

a 3, ā 1, ay. Three forms of a suffix added to verbs, after the pronominal suffixes, if any, and giving an interrogative force. Before them the kh of a pronominal suffix does not become h, as it does before another pronominal suffix, but a final h is dropped, i, ^{i}, or ĕ becomes y, and a final u (but not ^{u} or ^{ü}) becomes w, even when originally followed by such a dropped h. Thus, sapadi + ā becomes sapadyā, will he become? sapad^{i} + ā becomes sapadyā, did they (masc.) become? bŏvĕ + ā becomes bŏvyā, did they (fem.) become? chĕh + ā becomes chyā, is she? and chuh + ā becomes chwā, is he?; but kor^{u} + ā becomes kor^{u}ā, pronounced korā, was he made? and kür^{ü} + ā becomes kür^{ü}ā, pronounced kürā, was she made? After a final a the termination and the suffix (with the exception noted below) together become ā; thus, kara + a becomes karā, shall I make?

The rules for the use of these suffixes are somewhat complicated and are not always strictly followed. The following is the most usual custom:—

In the first person, or when immediately following a suffix of the first person, a is employed with the singular and ā with the plural. Thus, chus-a, am I (masc.)? chĕs-a, am I (fem.)? chu-m-a, is there to me? chyā (chih + ā or chĕh + ā), are we (masc. and fem.)?

In the second person singular and plural, or when immediately following a pronominal suffix of the second person, the usual form employed is a. Thus, chukh-a, art thou (masc.)? chĕkh-a, art thou (fem.)? chu-y-a (pronounced chuyĕ, see ĕ), is there to thee? In the plural, contrary to the rule just stated about final a, the final a of the termination is elided, so that we have chiw-a for chiwa + a, are you (masc.)? chĕw-a, are you (fem.)? The suffix ā can also be used with the second person, but is not polite.

In the third person ā is alone employed. Thus, chwā (chuh + ā), is he? chyā (chĕh + ā), is she? or (chih + ā), are they (masc.)? or (chĕh + ā), are they (fem.)? Occasionally we find a used with the feminine, as in sapüz^{ü}a, did she become?

In the feminine it is usual to substitute ay (or, after a vowel, y) for a or ā if a woman is addressed. Thus, karān chĕs-ay, am I making? (a woman is addressing a woman). If she were addressing a man she would say karān chĕs-a. Similarly, karān chy-ĕy (for karān chĕh + ay), do we make? if a woman is addressing a woman, but karān chy-ā if a man is addressed. In the second person a may be substituted for ay, so that we have karān chĕkh-ay, or karān chĕkh-a, art thou making? (in which either a man or a woman is addressing a woman). Similarly, in the second person plural we have karān chĕwa-y or karān chĕw-a, are you (fem.) making? For the third person we have karān chy-ĕy (karān chĕh + ay), is she making, or are they (fem.) making? (a man or a woman is addressing a woman).

Similar negative interrogatives are nā and nay.

ạ. The peculiar Kāshmīrī modified a, represented in the Nāgarī character by ऄ and in the Persian character by zabar. Thus, ऄदरुन, اَدرُن, ạd^{a}run, to be moist. The sound of this letter, which is not uncommon, has nothing corresponding to it in English. It is something between the ordinary a and the ŏ in 'hot', but is exactly equivalent to neither.

This ạ usually arises from the influence of a following ^{a}. Thus, chuh kalān, he is dumb, but chuh kạl^{a}rāwān, he makes dumb.

ȧ. This letter represents the sound which a takes when it is followed by ^{i}. It is represented in the Nāgarī character by ऄ, and in the Persian character by zabar. Thus, ऄसि, اَس, ȧs^{i}, we. The sound of this letter is that of a short ai. Thus ȧs^{i} sounds something like a^{i}s^{i}.

ā 2; for ā 1 see a 3. This is the ordinary ā of other Indian languages, and has the sound of a in 'father'. It is represented in Nāgarī by आ and in the Persian character by alif. Thus, काठ, کاٹھ, kāṭh, wood. This is a very unstable letter. When followed by i or ī it often becomes ö, and when followed by u it often becomes ô. Thus, mālis, to a father, becomes mölis; the Arabic qā'im becomes köim, established; tayārī becomes tayörī, readiness, and ṭhākur becomes ṭhôkur, an idol. Before the mātrā-vowels similar changes occur. Thus, before ^{a}, ^{i}, ^{o}, or ^{ü} it becomes ö, as in kön^{a}rāwān, to make one-eyed (from kānun, to have one eye); möl^{i} (base māl-), fathers; abög^{o}r^{u}, not divided (from bāg, division); brör^{ü} (base brār-), a cat; and before ^{u} it becomes ô, as in myôn^{u} (base myān-), my. Sometimes the ā becomes ö, even when no i or u follows, as in pönṭs, five; ös, a face.

ai 1. This is the ai of Hindī, pronounced like the y in 'my'. At the end of a word it is often written ay, as in rŏpai or rŏpay, a rupee. It is represented in Nāgarī by ऐ, and in Persian by zabar or zēr followed by yē. Thus, ऐठ, ایٹھ or اِیٹھ, aiṭh, eight. When not final, ai is often optionally pronounced as ö, as in aiṭh or öṭh, eight. Before ^{i} or ^{ü}, ai becomes ū. Thus, from the base kait-, how many? we have pl. dir. masc. kūt^{i}, sing. dir. fem. kūṭs^{ü}. Before ^{u} it becomes ū, as in sing. dir. masc. kūt^{u}.

ai 2. ऐ, conj. if. See ay.

ai 3. ऐ, interj. O! W. 101. ai Khudāyĕ or ai Khudāyō, O God! ib.; ai hākh, O cabbage! K.Pr. 4.

au is properly pronounced as in Hindī, but is usually hardly distinguishable from, and is freely interchangeable with, ō. Thus, कर्यौन् or कर्यौन्, کریون, karyōn or karyaun, he did. Before mātrā-vowels it is treated exactly like ō.

ᵉ. This mātrā-vowel bears the same relation to ᵃ that ĕ does to a. That is to say, when ᵃ follows ñ it becomes ᵉ. Thus, बञ्रावुन्, بَنبَراوُن or بَنبراوُن, baṇᵉrāwun, to cause to be. It is pronounced as a very short e, like the second e in 'ceremony'.

ĕ. When ya follows a consonant, or when a follows ñ or sh, it becomes ĕ, which is represented by य or ञ in Nāgarī and by zēr in the Persian character. Thus, व्यथ, وِتھ, vĕth, the River Jehlam; म्याञ, میاِنھ, myāñĕ, my (fem. plur.); ब्यञ, بِنھ, bĕñĕ, a sister. This letter is commonly pronounced like the e in 'met', but some Kāshmīrīs, especially Hindūs, put a slight y-sound in front of it, as if we said 'mʸet'. Before ⁱ, ĕ is unchanged in pronunciation, but is written in the Nāgarī character as modified. Thus, त्यठि tĕṭhⁱ, bitter (pl. masc.). Before ᵘ it becomes yo, as in त्यठु ṭyoṭhᵘ, bitter (sing. masc.). Before ᵘ̈ it becomes modified to ĕ (see below), as in त्यठ्ऽ ṭĕṭhᵘ̈, bitter (sing. fem.), pronounced almost ṭʸüṭh. Before ᵃ it becomes ę̆ (see below).

When ĕ (i.e. ya) follows ts, tsh, or z, the y is generally dropped, and ĕ becomes a. Thus dits + ya is not ditsĕ, but ditsa. The same also often occurs after s. The rules for this will be found in the grammars, under the head of the conjugation of verbs.

In the foregoing cases we actually find a used where we should expect ĕ after ts, tsh, or z. We have seen that after ñ an a is pronounced as ĕ. This is because the sound of y is inherent in ñ, which is pronounced as ny. The letter ña is therefore naturally pronounced as nyĕ. This change is universal. Kāshmīrīs also maintain that the sound of y is inherent in the four letters c, ch, j, and sh. In other words, they say that c is the same as cy, ch as chy, j as jy, and sh as shy, and they write them indifferently च, च्य; छ, छ्य; ज, ज्य; and श, श्य respectively. It thus follows that when ĕ follows any one of these three letters the y of the ya is usually, but not necessarily, omitted, so that cĕ is written च्य cya or च ca; chĕ is written छ्य chya or छ cha; jĕ, ज्य jya or ज ja; and shĕ, श्य shĕ or श sha. In other words, both च and च्य are pronounced as cĕ, and so on for the others. In the case of श, as in the case of अ, the pronunciation of a as ĕ is universal, and hence, in this dictionary, श is always transliterated shĕ, not sha. Here, in contrast to the foregoing, we have a change of spelling, but no change of sound.

Moreover, owing to the constant confusion between i and ĕ, ci is often written च (i.e. ca for cĕ) or च्य cĕ, and, conversely, we even find चि ci written instead of च ca or च्य cĕ. Similarly, the postposition nisha (or, better, nishĕ) निश, from, is often written in the Roman character nishi, and its real sound is nearer nishĕ than anything else. So on, for the others.

We have seen that ya only becomes ĕ when it follows a consonant in the same word. When ya is initial or follows a vowel it is pronounced yĕ, and will be so transliterated. Thus, यमिस, یمس, yĕmis (not yamis), to whom; बिय, بِمہ, biyĕ, also.

The letter ĕ is quite often interchanged with i, both in speaking and in writing. Most Kāshmīrīs seem to be unable to distinguish between the two sounds.

ę̆. This vowel bears the same relation to ĕ that ą bears to a. That is to say, ĕ becomes ę̆ in cases in which a would become ą. Its pronunciation is hardly affected. It is represented in Nāgarī by putting the mark ' over the corresponding sign for ĕ, and in the Persian character by zēr. Thus, from the व्यठुन, وِتھُن, vĕṭhun, to be fat, we get व्यठ्ऽन, وِتھُ̈رُن, vĕṭhᵃrun, to make fat, in which the ĕ has been modified to ę̆ owing to the influence of the following a-mātrā.

ĕ. This is the modified form of ĕ before ᵘ̈. It has a sound lying between i and ü, with a slight y-sound preceding, as in ṭĕṭhᵘ̈, above, under ĕ.

ē. This is the long ē of Hindī, pronounced like the a in 'mate'. It is represented by ए in Nāgarī, and by ye in the Persian character. Thus, मेल्, میل, mēl, unite. This sound cannot commence a word. In such a position ē always becomes yē. Thus, ēr, wool, becomes yēr. In the Nāgarī character an initial ē is optionally written, thus एर् or येर्, but the word is always pronounced yēr, and will be so written in this dictionary. The Persian character has always یٖر.

When ē is followed by ᵃ, ⁱ, or ᵘ̈ it becomes ī. Thus, from tēzun, to be sharp, we have tīᵃrāwun, to make sharp; from the base khēt- we have khītⁱ, a field (pl. nom. khētĕ); and from the base sēr- we have sīrᵘ̈, a brick (pl. nom. sērĕ). When ē is followed by ᵘ it becomes yū. Thus, from phērun, to revolve, we have for the past participle, masc. sing. phyūrᵘ, plur. phīrⁱ; fem. sing. phīrᵘ̈, plur. phērĕ.

For words beginning with ĕ, i, ī, see under yĕ, yi, yī respectively, and for words beginning with u, ū, see under wu, wū respectively.

The letter ē is quite often interchanged with ī, both in speaking and in writing. Most Kāshmīrīs seem to be unable to distinguish between the two sounds.

i. This is the i-mātrā of the Kāshmīrī alphabet. It has the sound of a very slightly pronounced i, and it also affects the pronunciation of the vowels of the preceding syllable, as explained under the head of each vowel. It is represented in Nāgarī by ि, and in the Persian character by zēr. Thus, म्यांनि, میانِ, myönⁱ, my (masc. pl.).

i. This is the ordinary i of Hindī, pronounced like the i in 'pin'. It is represented in the Nāgarī character by ि and in the Persian by zēr. Thus, निश, نشہ, nishĕ, near. When followed by ᵃ, ⁱ, or ᵘ it is not perceptibly changed, but before ᵘ it becomes yu. Thus kitᵘ becomes kyutᵘ. In the Nāgarī character we meet both कितु and क्युतु, but the pronunciation is always that of the latter, and that spelling will be followed in this dictionary.

The sound of i cannot commence a word. In such a position i always becomes yi. Thus, ih, this, becomes yih. In the Nāgarī character it is optionally written द्यह or यिह, but the word is always pronounced yih, and will be so written in this dictionary. The Persian character always has یہ.

The letter i is quite often interchanged with ĕ, both in speaking and in writing. Most Kāshmīrīs seem to be unable to distinguish between the two sounds.

ī. This is the ordinary long i of Hindī, pronounced like the i in 'pique'. It is represented in the Nāgarī character by ी and in the Persian by yē preceded by zēr. Thus, शीन, شین, shīn, snow. When followed by ᵃ, ⁱ, or ᵘ it is not changed, but before ᵘ it becomes yū. Thus, from the base nīl- we have nyūlᵘ, blue. This sometimes occurs before an ordinary u; thus, the genitive of bīma, a policy of insurance, is byūmukᵘ.

The sound of ī cannot commence a word. In such a position ī always become yī. Thus, īran, an anvil, becomes yīran. In the Nāgarī character it is optionally written द्यीरन or यीरन, but the word is always pronounced yīran, and will be so written in this dictionary. The Persian character always has یِرَن.

The letter ī is quite often interchanged with ē, both in speaking and in writing. Most Kāshmīrīs seem to be unable to distinguish between the two sounds.

ᵒ. This bears the same relation to ᵃ that o does to a. When ᵃ is followed by ᵘ it becomes ᵒ. Like ᵃ it is omitted in the Nāgarī character. In the Persian character it is represented by pēsh. Thus, from the root द्ᵃन dᵃn, shake out, we have the past participle द्ᵒनु, دُن, dᵒnᵘ.

ŏ. When wa follows a consonant it becomes ŏ, which is represented by व in Nāgarī and by pēsh in Persian. Thus, दव, دُد, dŏd, milk. This letter has the sound of o in 'hot'. Some pronounce this with a very faint w-sound preceding the ŏ; thus, dʷŏd. When followed by ᵃ or ⁱ the pronunciation of ŏ remains unaffected. When followed by ᵘ or ᵘ̈ it becomes modified to ǒ or ŏ̈ respectively.

The letter ŏ is quite often interchanged with u, both in speaking and in writing. Most Kāshmīrīs seem to be unable to distinguish between the two sounds.

ǒ. This is the modified form which ŏ takes when followed by ᵘ. It is pronounced nearly the same as o. Thus, ग्वनु, گُن, gǒnᵘ, a stack, is pronounced gon. This word cannot be transliterated gonᵘ, as it is spelt with व in the Nāgarī character.

ŏ̈. This is the modified form which ŏ takes when followed by ᵘ̈. It is pronounced nearly the same as ü, but tending towards a short ö. Thus, छ्वपु, چھپ, shŏ̈pᵘ̈, silent (fem.), has a sound which lies between shüp and shöp.

o. This is the sound which a takes when followed by ᵘ. It is nearly the same as that of the first o in 'promote'. It is represented in Nāgarī by ो and in the Persian character by pēsh. Thus, बोडु, بُڈ, boḍᵘ, great. We sometimes meet this letter when a is followed by an ordinary u, as in ogunᵘ for agunᵘ (also used) fire. When, in the process of declension or conjugation or for any other reason, the ᵘ or u disappears, the raison d'être for the o disappears also, and it reverts to the original a, which is then, as before, subject to further changes. Thus, the dative singular of boḍᵘ is baḍis, the agent singular is bàḍⁱ, and the direct feminine singular is büḍᵘ̈. Similarly, the dative singular of ogun is ągᵃnas.

ō 1. This is the long ō of Hindī, pronounced like the second o in 'promote'. It is represented in Nāgarī by ओ and in the Persian character by wāw. Thus, पोश, پوش, pōsh, a flower. When ō is followed by any mātrā-vowel it becomes ū. Thus, from pōṭhun, to be fat, we have pūṭhᵃrāwun, to make fat; from the base bōl- we have būlⁱ, speech, but dat. sing. bōlĕ; from bōzun, to hear, we have the past participle būzᵘ (masc.) and būzᵘ̈ (fem.).

Unlike u and ū, the letter ō can commence a word, e.g. ōra-kani, thence.

The letter ō is quite often interchanged with ū, both in speaking and in writing. Most Kāshmīrīs seem to be unable to distinguish between the two sounds.

ō 2 ओ । अस्तु, adv. yes. ō-tu ओ-तु । आं तु, adv. yes but, yes with a reservation.

ô. This letter bears the same relation to ā that o does to a. It is the form that ā takes when followed by ᵘ (or in some cases by u, see ā). It has the sound of a prolonged broad ō, nearly the equivalent to that of the o in 'glory'. Like ō it is represented in Nāgarī by ओ, and in Persian by wāw. Thus, from the base māl- with ᵘ added, we have मोल्, ﻣﻮﻝ, môlᵘ, a father.

ö. This letter bears nearly the same relation to ā that ü does to a. It is the form that ā takes when followed by ⁱ or ᵘ. As explained under ā, it also often takes this form when followed by an ordinary i, or even when in a monosyllable and not followed by any mātrā-vowel. It is sounded something like a much prolonged German o. It is represented in Nāgarī by आ॑ and in the Persian character by ﺁ. Thus, मा॑लि, ﻣﺂﻟﯽ, mölⁱ, fathers; आ॑स, ﺁﺱ, ös, face.

ᵘ. This is the u-mātrā vowel. At the end of a syllable it is silent, but when followed by a consonant in the same syllable it becomes an ordinary u. Thus, korᵘ, pronounced kor; korᵘ-thas, pronounced korthas, and korᵘn, pronounced korun. Under most circumstances it affects the pronunciation of the vowel of the preceding syllable, e.g. changing ᵃ to °, a to o, ā to ô, ĕ to yo, i to yu, ī to yū, and ō to ū. A preceding u or ū, however, it leaves unchanged. It is represented, when final, in Nāgarī by ◌ु, and is usually omitted in the Persian character. Thus, कर्‍ु, کُر, korᵘ, done; बड़ु, بُڈ, boḍᵘ, great. When medial, it is represented as an ordinary u. Thus, कर्‍ुन्, کُرُن, korun, he did.

u. This is the regular u of Hindī, pronounced like the u in 'full'. It is represented in Nāgarī by ◌ु and in the Persian character by pēsh. Thus, कुस्, کُس, kus, who? This vowel is not affected by any mātra-vowel.

The sound of u cannot commence a word. In such a position u always becomes wu. Thus, uḍar, a plateau, becomes wuḍar. In the Nāgarī character it is optionally spelt उडर or वुडर, but the word is always pronounced wuḍar, and will be so written in this dictionary. In the Persian character it is always وُڈر.

The letter u is quite often interchanged with ŏ, both in speaking and in writing. Most Kāshmīrīs seem to be unable to distinguish between the two sounds.

ū. This is the long ū of Hindī, pronounced like the ū in 'rule'. It is represented in Nāgarī by ◌ू, and in the Persian character by wāw preceded by pēsh. Thus, चूर, چُور, sūr, a thief. Like u, this ū is not affected by any mātrā-vowel.

As in the case of u, the sound of ū cannot commence a word. In such a position it becomes wū. Thus, ūṭh, a camel, becomes wūṭh. In the Nāgarī character it is optionally spelt ऊठ् or वूँठ्, but the word is always pronounced wūṭh, and will be so written in this dictionary. In the Persian character it is always وُوٹھ.

The letter ū is quite often interchanged with ō, both in speaking and in writing. Most Kāshmīrīs seem to be unable to distinguish between the two sounds.

ᵘ. This is the u-mātrā vowel. At the end of a syllable, like ᵘ, it is silent; and when followed by a consonant in the same syllable, it is pronounced as a very short German u. Thus, kürᵘ, pronounced kür; kürᵘ-thas, pronounced kürthas; kürᵘn, pronounced kürᵘn, with the second syllable short; and gāṭᵘjᵘ, pronounced gāṭᵘj. Under most circumstances, when original, it affects the pronunciation of the vowel of the preceding syllable, e.g. changing ᵃ to ᵘ, a to ü, ā to ö, ĕ to ĕ, ē to ī, ō to ū. A preceding i, ī, u, or ū, however, it leaves unchanged. When ᵃ is changed to ᵘ, under the influence of a following ᵘ, this new, secondary, ᵘ does not, in its turn, affect a preceding vowel. Thus, gāṭᵃjᵘ becomes gāṭᵘjᵘ, not göṭᵘjᵘ. It is represented in Nāgarī by ◌ू, and, when final, is generally omitted in the Persian character. When not final it is sometimes represented by zabar and sometimes by zēr. Thus, कर्‍ू, کر, kürᵘ; बड़ू, بڈ, büḍᵘ, कर्‍ून्, کرَن or کرِن, kürᵘn.

ü. This is the sound which a takes when followed by ᵘ. It is nearly the same as the short German u. It is represented in Nāgarī by अ॑ and in the Persian character by zabar. Thus, बड़ू, بڈ, büḍᵘ, great (fem.). When in the process of declension or conjugation or for any other reason the ᵘ disappears, the raison d'être for the ü disappears also, and it reverts to the original a, as explained under the head of o, q.v.

ū. This letter, which is peculiar to the Kāshmīrī, is pronounced something like a long-drawn German u. It is represented in the Nāgarī character by ◌ॅ, and in the Persian usually by yē, as in सूत्य, ﺳﯿﺖ, sūty, with. The vowel often represents the diphthong ai, followed by ⁱ or ᵘ. Thus, from the base kait- we have a fem. sing. kūtsᵘ, how much? and a pl. masc. dir. kūtⁱ.

Very common with interrogatives, in which case its use closely resembles that of the Hindī tō, as in the following. -kōr -कोर् । तर्हि कस्मिन्पार्श्वे adv. then where? then in what direction? as if we were to say, "if it's not there, then where is it?" i.e. "it's nowhere". -kōr-kun -कोर्-कुन् । तर्हि कस्मिन्पार्श्वे, the same as ada-kōr. -kōra-kani -कोर-कनि । तर्हि कस्मात्पार्श्वत: adv. then whence? -kus -कुस् । तर्हि क: m.an. (f.an. -kŏssa -क्कस्स, inan. -kyāh -क्याह्), adj. pron. then who? then what? hence, then there is no one, or nothing; (inanimate) what else, of course. -kus-sanā -कुस्-सना । तर्हि क: नमु, the same as ada-kus. -kus ta ada-kas -कुस् त अद्-कस् । तर्हि क: कस्मै, then who, and then to whom? i.e. there is no one (to give), and therefore no one to whom to give (or no one need expect anything). -kati -कति । तर्हि कुत्र, or -kati-sanā -कति-सना । तर्हि कुत्र स्वित् adv. then where? (used after a verb signifying 'to put', etc.). -kot^{u} -कंतु । तर्हि कुत्र, or -kot^{u}-kun -कंतु-कुन् । तर्हि कस्मिन्पार्श्वे adv. then where? then in what direction? -kūt^{u} -कूतु । तर्हि कियान् (f. -kūṭs^{u} -कूट्सु), or -kūt^{u}-sanā -कूतु-सना । तर्हि कियान् नमु adj. then how much? -kūt^{i} -कूति । तर्हि कति m.pl. (f. -kūtsa -कूत्स or -kaitsa -कैत्स), or -kūt^{i}-sanā -कूति-सना । तर्हि कियन्तो नमु, then how many? -kĕtha -कथ। तर्हि कथम्, or -kĕtha-sanā -कथ-सना। तर्हि कथं ननु, or -kĕtha-pöṭh[i] -कथ-पाठि। तर्हि केन प्रकारेण, or -kĕtha-pöṭh[i]-sanā -कथ-पाठि-सना। तर्हि केन प्रकारेण ननु adv. then how? then in what manner? -kōtāh -कोताह। तर्हि कियान् (f. -kaitsāh -कैत्साह), or -kōtāh-sanā -कोताह-सना। तर्हि कियान् ननु adj. then how much? -kaityāh -कैत्याह। तर्हि कियन्तः (f. -kaitsah -कैत्साह), or -kaityāh-sanā -कैत्याह-सना। तर्हि कियन्तो ननु adj. then how many? -kūtyun[u] -कूत्युन्। तर्हि कियत्संख्याकः (मूल्यः) (f. -kūtiñ[u] -कुतिञ्), or -kūtyun[u]-sanā -कूत्युन्-सना। तर्हि कियत्संख्याकः adj. then consisting of how many? then of what price? -kawa -कव। तर्हि कुतः, or -kawa-sanā -कव-सना। तर्हि कुतो नाम, or -kawa-kani -कव-कनि। तर्हि केन कारणेन, or -kawa-kani-sanā -कव-कनि-सना। तर्हि केन कारणेन स्वित् adv. then for what reason? then why? -kyāh-ō -क्याहो। तर्हि किं भोः adv. then what, sir? i.e. here it is, do you want anything else? what else? of course. -kyuth[u] -क्युथ्। तर्हि कीदृशः (f. -kiśh[u] -किश्छ्), or -kyuth[u]-sanā -क्युथ्-सना। तर्हि कीदृक ननु adj. then of what kind?

ada is also frequently employed with verbs expressing propriety or necessity, and is then equivalent to the Hindī tō. Thus, ada goṣh[u] tot[u] gaṣhun[u] अद गंछ् तंत् गछुन्। तर्हि योग्यं तत्र गन्तव्यमासीत्, then it is proper to go there, in that case you should go there. —lagi tati bihun[u] —लगि तति बिछुन्। ततः संगतं तत्रासितव्यं, then (in that case) it is proper to settle there. —pazi tati dapun[u] —पज़ि तति द्पुन्। ततो योग्यं तत्र वक्तव्यम्, then (in that case) it is proper to tell (it) there.

ada combined with vocative particles often expresses simply 'yes', and with an interrogative adverb simply 'no', in the sense of agreeing or refusing to do something that one has been asked to do. Thus, adā (ada + a) अदा। अस्तु adv. yes (addressed to an inferior). adō (ada + ō) अदो। अस्तु adv. yes, that's right (addressed to an inferior who is at a distance). ada-bā अद-बा। अस्तु भोः adv. yes (in addressing a male of equal rank). -biñ[u] -बिञ्। अस्तु भोः adv. good, yes (in addressing a female of equal rank). -kaṭi -कति। नहि adv. then where? hence, in the sense of a negative, 'no.' -sö -सों। अस्तु भोः adv. good; yes, sir (respectfully addressed to a male). -kyā -क्या। अस्तु adv. good, yes (addressed to a person present), of course. -kyā-bā -क्या-बा। तर्हि किं भोः adv. good, yes (addressed by a woman to a man, or by a man to an equal). -kyā-biñ[u] -क्या-बिञ्। तर्हि किम् अयि adv. good, yes (addressed by a man to a woman of equal rank). -kyā-sö -क्या-सों। तर्हि किं भोः adv. good, yes (used respectfully by a man). aday अदय्। अस्तु adv. good; yes (used in answer to an inferior or younger woman).

an 2 अन् pron. suff. of the 3rd pers. sg. in either the acc. or the ag. case, and added to any finite form of a verb. If the verbal form ends in a vowel, the initial a is dropped. Thus, karān chuh-an करान् छुहन्, thou makest him; koru-n कॉरुन्, made by him, he made. If the verb be in the 3rd person, an in the sense of the acc. is not used, as अस् being substituted, as in suh karān chu-s सुह करान् छुस्, not suh karān chu-n सुह करान् छुन्, he makes him (Gr.Gr. 185). an अन् is also used to indicate the nom. case, when the nom. represents the object of a transitive verb in a past tense, as in trôwuth-an, he was released by thee, thou releasedst him (Gr.M. 1057), so mŏka-lôwuth-an (Śiv. 3).

an 3 अन् a primary suffix forming abstract nouns from certain verbal roots. In the case of three verbs whose roots end in ĕ (viz., chyonu च्यॉनु, to drink; khyonu ख्यॉनु, to eat; and hyonu ह्यॉनु, to place) the initial a is dropped, and the abstract noun is masc. Thus, cĕn च्यन्, drinking. In the case of the other verbs with which this suff. is used, the abs. noun is fem. A list of these verbs will be found in Gr.Gr. 120 ff.

an 4 अन्, anī 1 अनी, anas अनस्, or anan अनन्, a secondary suff. added pleonastically to adverbs of place (see Gr.Gr. 155).

ān 1 आन् । आज्ञा f. an order, command, used in the following: -mönī -मॉनी । परस्पराज्ञापालनम् f. obeying (mutual) orders, mutual respect; mutual confidence, mutual loyalty. —mānüñu —मानॅञ् । आज्ञामाननम् f.inf. to obey orders; to become subject to anyone.

ān 2 आन्, a prim. suff. forming the pres. part., as in kar-ān करान् doing (Gr.Gr. 104).

ān 3 आन् a sec. suff. added to some few words, giving an adjectival force with a bad sense, as dand दन्द्, a tooth, dandān दन्द्रान्, having an ugly tooth (Gr.Gr. 137).

āna 1 आन । पणद्वयमानद्रव्यम् m. the name of a certain coin or sum of money, an anna.

āna 2 आन । समये adv. at a (certain) time, only used -°, as in tami-āna तमि-आन, at that time.

anī 2 अनी (for 1 see an 4), a primary suffix indicating necessity, like the Latin part. in -ndum, as in karanī करनी, it must be made. Added to a root ending in a vowel, the initial a is dropped, as in dinī दिनी, it is to be given (Gr.Gr. 111).

aina ऐन or öna ओन (=البينه) । आदर्शः m. a mirror, a looking-glass (Śiv. 500, 558, 1547). A number of blind men form a line and go along the pilgrim-roads begging. The front man sings a song, to which the others reply in chorus. -sörü -सॉरू । अन्धमार्गणा f. search by a blind man; hence, met., searching for anything in the dark; or searching futilely and without system for anything lost or destroyed. -thapa -थप । अन्धावलम्बनम् m.pl. grasping by a blind man; hence, met., when the proper resource is wanting, using the first thing that comes to hand as a substitute, or taking hold of anything without first seeing what it is.

anis mushth hāwüñü na sawāb na gŏnāh अनिस् मुश्थ् हावॅञू न सवाब् न ग्वनाह । निष्फलप्रयासः to shake one's fist at a blind man is neither a good action nor a sin (he does not see it, and it neither pleases him nor angers him); used of making an exertion the result of which is absolutely indifferent.

añĕ-ach^{i}-gāsh अञ-अंछि-गाश् । अन्धाक्षिप्रकाशः m. the light of a blind eye; the little, but much treasured, light of a blind eye; hence, met., an only son, a darling son, a favourite son. -chapür^{u} -छपंऊ । क्रीडाविशेषः f. a children's game. One boy is blindfold and another boy hides, the former, after being unblindfolded, having to find out where the latter is. -gāth -गाथ् । कलङ्कवाञ्छम् m. (sg. dat. -gātas -गातस् and so on), a disgrace, a mark of shame or dishonour brought on as the result of some sinful act, or (in the case of a family) by sinful practices. -khöröt^{i} -खारांति । अत्यरोचकः adj. e.g. extremely unpleasant, deserving to be hidden away.

añi-gaṭa अञि-गट f. or -goṭ^{u} -गंटु m. । अन्धकारः darkness, whether by day or by night (Śiv. 157); met., the sensation of darkness caused by fainting or the like; f.abl. añigaṭi, in the dark (K.Pr. 13, 82, cf. 226). -gaṭilad -गटिलद् adj. e.g. dark (of a night, or the like) (Gr.M.).

on^{u} 3 अनु, un 1 उन्, un^{u} 1 उनु, a m. prim. suff. forming (1) the verbal noun or infinitive, and (2) the future passive participle, as in karon^{u} करंनु, karun करन्, or karun^{u}, the act of doing, to do, or about to be done, necessary to be done. See Gr.Gr. 112 ff.

un 2 उन् (for 1 see under on^{u} 3). A sec. suff. indicating condition, only noted in mait-un मैतुन्, the condition of a corpse (Gr.Gr. 144).

un^{u} 2 उनु (f. ün^{u} अंञू), a suffix forming the genitive, used mostly with masc. proper names, as in rāmun^{u} रामुनु (f. rāmün^{u} रामंञू), of or belonging to Rāma, and with the word pāna पान self, forming the adj. panun^{u} पनुनु (f. panün^{u} पनंञू), own (Gr.Gr. 42, 152). āsan 3 आसन्, they will be. See āsun.

āsān 1 आसान् آسان । सुकरः: adj. e.g. easy, facile, feasible, manageable. —pöth^{i} —पोंठि । सुकरप्रकारेण adv. easily.

āsān 2 आसान् pres. part. of āsun, q.v.

asun असुन् । हसनम् conj. 1 (1 p.p. os^{u} ओसु; 2 p.p. asōv असोव्), to laugh (K.Pr. 48). In the past tenses this verb is construed impersonally. Thus, osu-m ओसुम्, it was laughed by me, I laughed; osu-n ओसुन्, he or she laughed; os^{u} ओसु, we laughed, and so on.

asun असुन् m. a laugh (K.Pr. 260, Śiv. 788). Its abl. is asana असन, as in the following.

asana-hanā असन-हना f. a small laugh, a smile. —karüñ^{u} — करंजू, to smile (Gr.M.).

asān-asān असान्-असान् । अत्यानन्देन, अतिशीघ्रम् pres. part., laughing, laughing; hence, as adv., cheerfully, happily, joyfully, and met., very quickly, speedily (Śiv. 899, 917).

às^{i}-às^{i} अंसि-अंसि । हसित्वा हसित्वा conj. part. laughing, laughing; hence, as adv., joyfully, quickly, speedily.

āsun आसुन् । भवनम् conj. 2 (1 p.p. ôs^{u} ओसु, pl. ös^{i} आंसि; f. ös^{u} आंसू, pl. āsa 2 आस; 2 p.p. āsyōv आस्योव is not used), (lit.) to sit; hence, to remain, continue, abide (Śiv. 1832); to be, to become (passim). The past tense is employed as the ordinary past tense of the verb substantive. Thus, ôsus ओसुस्, I was. Similarly, for all other tenses except the present, 'I am' being chhus छुस्. The present of this verb indicates condition. Thus, suh chhuh yiśhanwôl^{u} āsān indicates that he is not only eager, but that he is in a general condition of eagerness (so Śiv. 90, 1040).

The verb is also employed as an auxiliary, like the Hindōstānī thā or hōnā; thus it forms an imperfect, as in suh ôs^{u} karān, he was doing; a pluperfect tàm^{i} ôs^{u} kor^{u}-mot^{u}, he had done, and other tenses, such as suh āsi karān (wŏh jāntā hōgā), he is probably doing, hargāh bŏh karān āsahö (agar maī karta hōtā), had I been doing, or yĕduwai mĕ āsihē kor^{u}-mot^{u} (agar maī-nē kiyā hōtā), had I done. As a verb substantive it often governs a dative of possession, then meaning 'to have'. Thus, mĕ āsi or āsĕ-m, there will be to me, I shall have; mĕ ôs^{u} or ôsu-m, I had. Gr.M., K.Pr. 114, YZ. 245.

This verb has a benedictive mood, which is thus conjugated: sg. 2, āshĕkh आश्यख्, mayst thou be; pl. 2, āshiv आश्यिव्, sg. and pl. 3, āshĕn आश्यन् (Śiv. 188, 940).

In poetry the pres. part. is sometimes āsan आसन् or āsana आसन, instead of āsān आसान् (e.g. Śiv. 1040, 1724).

āsun-bāsun आसुन्-बासुन् । द्रव्यसंपत्तिः m.inf. being and appearance, or possibly a jingling repetition of āsun; hence, a person's possessions, property.

āsan-wôlᵘ आसन्-वोलु । समृद्धः adj. (f. -wājĕñ -वाज्यञ्), wealthy, having great possessions.

In Śiv. 1364 there is a pun on this word and on ata-gath 2.

ata-gath 2 अत-गथ् । दायविशेष: m. (sg. dat. -gatas -गतस्), a present of money, salt, and cakes given by her parents to a bride when setting out for her husband's house (K.Pr. 73, Śiv. 1364; cf. ata-gath 1).

ath 1 अथ् । अद: pron. dem. that (within sight or pointed to), this, both substantive and adjective. It is commonly referred to the pronoun huh ऊह्, q.v., and is defective. It has no nominative, the word ath अथ् being the dative singular inanimate. It has three genders—(1) masculine animate, (2) feminine animate, and (3) inanimate (whether masc. or fem.). In most forms the masc. an. and the fem. an. are the same. When this is the case the form will be indicated simply by 'an.' The following forms occur: dat. sg. an. amis अमिस् (Śiv. 809 m., 874 f.); inan. ath अथ् (Śiv. 47, 929); gen. sg. an. ȧm[i]-sond[u] अंमि-संन्दु (Śiv. 806), or asond[u] असंन्दु (Śiv. 803, 813); inan. amyuk[u] अम्युक् (Śiv. 69); ag. masc. an. ȧm[i] अंमि (Śiv. 45); fem. ami अमि (Śiv. 91); inan. ȧm[i] अंमि (Śiv. 46); abl. an. and inan. ami अमि. No plural forms have been noted, nor any for the nom. sing. For the missing forms the corresponding forms of huh ऊह् are employed. With emphatic y य्, ath becomes ȧth[i] अंथि (Śiv. 1754), ȧm[i] अंमि becomes ȧmiy अंमिय् (Śiv. 803), and ami अमि becomes amiy अमिय् (Śiv. 648). When this pronoun is used as an adjective there are some variations in the declension. When agreeing with an animate feminine noun the dative is ami अमि, not amis अमिस्, which is the dative of the pronoun when referring as a substantive to any animate noun, whether masc. or fem. Thus, ami kōrĕ अमि कोर्य, to this girl. When agreeing with an inanimate noun, the only dative inanimate form used is ath अथ्, which agrees with any inanimate noun in the dative singular, whether masc. or fem. Thus, ath cīzas अथ् चीज़स्, to this thing, ath kāmĕ अथ् काम्य, for this work (so Śiv. 164). In other cases the distinction between animate and inanimate disappears, and the adjectival pronoun agrees with the qualified noun in gender and case like any other adjective. Thus, to take the genitive, we have masc. an. amis sāhiba-sond[u] अमिस् साहिब-संन्दु, of this gentleman; inan. ami cīzuk[u] अमि चीज़ुक्, of this thing; fem. an. ami kōrĕ-hond[u] अमि कोर्य-हंन्दु, of this girl; ami jyāyĕ-hond[u] अमि ज्याय-हंन्दु, of this place (so Śiv. 91). In composition awa अव is frequently used instead of ami अमि and away अवय् instead of amiy अमिय्. It sometimes also becomes a अ in composition (see Gr.Gr. 151).

b ब ب. The first consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet, the twenty-third (or, if we count ṣ, ṣh, and z, the twenty-sixth) consonant when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, and the second consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. It has the sound of the letter b in English.

The Sanskrit aspirate sonant bha भ does not exist as a pronounced sound in Kāshmīrī. When a Hindī or Sanskrit word containing this letter also occurs in Kāshmīrī, the bh भ् is represented by b ब्. Thus, the Sanskrit bhavati भवति, he becomes, is represented in Kāshmīrī by bŏvi ब्वि. In the case of words borrowed directly from Sanskrit, the bh भ् is often, but not always, retained in writing in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character. Thus, the Sanskrit word Bhagavān भगवान्, a name of the Deity, appears in Kāshmīrī written in these characters both as भगवान् and as बगवान्, but the pronunciation is always bagawān. Similarly, the Sanskrit word bhakti भक्ति, faith, becomes in Kāshmīrī bákt^{i} बक्ति and other related forms, although occasionally spelt भक्ति.

In the present work, whether a word is spelt in the Nāgarī character with भ् or with ब्, that letter will always be transliterated b, and hence words found in any native book spelt with भ् should be looked up, in the English order, under b. Thus, भगवान् will be found, in alphabetical order, under bagawān. As a rule, spellings with भ् will not be indicated in this Dictionary, even in the Nāgarī character. The principal exception to this rule will be found in the case of proper names, in which it is most usual to preserve the भ् in native writing. Thus, the Sanskrit proper name Bhairava भैरव, a name of Śiva, will be shown in this Dictionary as bairav बै(भै)रव्.

ba ب, the Persian inseparable prep., with, by, for, from, in, etc. As in bakār بکار, for use, serviceable. Cf. W. 99.

bā 1 با, the Persian prep., with, by, possessed of, as in bā-adab, with politeness, politely. Cf. W. 99.

bā 2 बा, an interjectional suff. used in addressing males. It means literally 'brother!', and is employed as follows:—hē nārān bā, O Nārān, in addressing a priest, a person of the middle class or a servant. If he is old, hata-sö-hē . . . bā or hata-bā-hē . . . bā is used. If a woman addresses a man or a woman respectfully she says hata-bā . . . bā, or if addressing a familiar or junior, hata-bā . . . au or hata-bā . . . a, or when addressing persons by their proper names only, hata-bā . . . a-bāyĕ or hata-bā . . . a-bāyau. Other words are often prefixed, as in ada-bā (v. ada), āhan-bā (v. āhan), and na-bā, No, sir. Cf. Gr.Gr. 99 ff., W. 101, and L. 279. For examples of its use see K.Pr. 49, 232; Śiv. 1244.

bāī 2, m. a treaty (El.).

bāū, m. the forearm (El.).

bē 1 or bĕ बे or ब्य, بے, the Persian privative particle, prefixed to other words, as in bē-adab, without politeness, insolent. It is equivalent in meaning to the Kāshmīrī suff. rost^{u} (q.v.). Although a Persian prefix it is also commonly employed, usually under the form bĕ ब्य, with non-Persian words, as in bĕ-bayĕ, fearless. For words commencing with this prefix see s.vv. It is often used as a mere preposition, governing another noun, and meaning 'without', as in yilm bē bahs, knowledge without argument (K.Pr. 216). Similarly, adverbial phrases, such as bē sabab, without cause, causelessly.

bē 2 بے, the name of the second letter of the Persian alphabet. Alif-bē = a b c, the alphabet.

Gr.Gr. 122. —asun —असुन् । कार्योपेक्षाभ्यासयोगः, अलसीभवनम् m.inf. laziness to enter; slackness in work to be exhibited, laziness to be shown. -dār -दार् । साधारः adj. e.g. fitted with a ring support as ab. -drāv -द्राव् । निर्मलीभूतः, अधस्तात्संहतमलः adj. e.g. that of which the sediment has settled, clarified, clear. -wāl -वाल् । अकर्मण्यतया परोद्वेजकः, अधोगतमलः adj. e.g. one who stops work and intimidates others; a lazy person who stops at home (K.Pr. 193, W. 21); of a liquid, that of which the impurities have settled as a sediment and is now clear; K.Pr. and W. both spell this word bĕhwāl. -wölī -वॉली । कार्यहीनता f. the lazy do-nothing of one who has stopped work and is without employment.

bih (? spelling) in bih-dāna, m. seeds of the quince (L. 389).

bŏh बुह । अहम् e.g., pron. of 1st pers. I (YZ. 19). In poetry this word sometimes takes the form bō बो or bū बू. With the emph. part. y य्, it takes the form bŏy बुय् (Siv. 24) or buy बुय्, even I, I indeed. So also with the conj. ay अय्, if, we have bŏy बुय्, if I (Gr.Gr. 257), and similarly we have bŏ-ti बुति, I also (Gr.M., Śiv. 73, 119, 988, 1608), bŏnai बुनै, not I (Gr.Gr. 22). This pronoun has no gen. sg. or pl., employing instead thereof the possessive prons. myôn^{u}, my, and sôn^{u}, our, qq.v. In the sg. for all cases exc. the nom. it has mĕ म्य (Śiv. 511). In the pl. its nom. is ás^{i} 1 ॲसि (Śiv. 984); other cases, exc. gen., asĕ अस्य (Śiv. 1284). (For ás^{i} 2 see asun.)

As in the case of the other personal pronouns, this pron. has a series of pronominal suffixes, but only for the sg. number. It has no suff. for the pl. These suffixes can be optionally added to any finite form of a verb. The suff. of the nom. sing. is s स्, and of all other cases of the sg. is m म्. These are added directly to forms ending in vowels, but when added to a form ending in a consonant they take a अ as a junction-vowel. Thus pok^{u} + s becomes pokus पॅकुस्, I went; kor^{u} + m becomes korum कॅरुम्, made by me, I made; korun + s becomes kor^{u}nas कॅरुनस्, I was made by him, he made me.

There are certain irregularities in adding these suffixes. The principal are: (1) A final h is dropped before them, and a final kh (the suffix of the nom. of the 2nd pers. sg. and of the 3rd pers. pl.) becomes h. Thus chhuh + m becomes chhum छुम्, there is to me, I have; korukh + s becomes kor^{u}has कॅरुहस्, I was made by them, they made me. (2) Before them the term. av becomes ō and iv becomes yū. Thus karav + m becomes karōm करोम्, we shall make for me, and kariv + m becomes karyūm कर्यूम्, make ye me, or for me. (3) When added to the 3rd sg. fut. the final i of the verb is changed to ĕ. Thus kari + m becomes karĕm कर्यम्, he shall make me. (4) When added to the 2nd sg. impve. they take u as a junction vowel. Thus kar + m becomes karum कर्म्, make thou me. (Cf. Gr.Gr. 87, 181, 183, 257.)

bŏh-tāna wanān¹ बुह्-तान वनंन् । कल्पितप्रलाप: m. pl. inf. to tell an imaginary story, so as to gain another's confidence.

bahāgañ बहागञ् । अष्टीवराटका:, काकिणी f. a certain nominal coin, the value of the eighth part of a British pice. The latter is now used as the equivalent of the old nominal coin (representing a hundred cowries) called the hath or 'hundreder'. Bahāgañ therefore means 'a twelver' (for 'a twelve-and-a-halfer'). As sixty-four cowries now go to a pice, therefore a bahāgañ now equals eight cowries. Cf ad¹-hyol[u] and RT.Tr. ii, 312.

bahāgañĕ-hond[u] बहागञ्-हंन्दु । काकिणीमूल्य: adj. (f. -hünz[u] -हंज़ू), of or belonging to eight cowries; costing eight cowries.

C च् ـچ, CH छ् ـچھ

c च् ـچ. The second consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet in the Roman character, the sixth when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, and the eighth when written in the Perso-Arabic character. It has the sound of ch in the English 'church'.

Its aspirate is ch छ ـچھ, the seventh consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character.

A c or ch occurring in a Sanskrit or Hindī word is very frequently changed respectively to ṣ or ṣh in Kāshmīrī, which are in Nāgarī commonly written ष़ and ष़्ह, and in Perso-Arabic ـۄ and ـۅھ. Thus, the Sanskrit candraḥ चन्द्रः becomes Kāshmīrī ṣaṇd^{a}r ष़ंन्दर, and the Hindī chhoṭā becomes Kāshmīrī ṣhoṭ^{u} ष़्होटु. In fact, to Kāshmīrī ears, c is ṣ followed by y, and ch is ṣh followed by y. In other words, to a Kāshmīrī, c च् is really cy च्य्, and ch छ् is really chy छ्य्. It thus follows that many Kāshmīrīs, when writing their own language in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, put no dot under ष़् or ष़्ह्, when these represent ṣ or ṣh respectively; but, on the contrary, represent c by च्य् and ch by छ्य्. So strongly is the y-sound heard in these two letters by Kāshmīrīs, that ca च is usually pronounced cĕ च्य, and cha छ is usually pronounced chĕ छ्य, ya य following a consonant being always sounded as ĕ or yĕ (see article ĕ). Thus, the word caras चरस् is usually pronounced cĕras च्यरस्, and the word chakun छकुन् is usually pronounced chĕkun छ्यकुन्. In the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, each method of writing each of these two words is equally common. In the Perso-Arabic character (in which the short vowels are generally omitted) this question of spelling hardly arises. Similarly, the word cāra चार is quite commonly written cyāra च्यार, and chot^{u} छोटु is equally commonly written chyot^{u} छ्योटु. Again, the 1 p.p. of the verb chōrun छोरुन् should according to rule be chūr^{u} छूर्, but we also find it written chyūr^{u} छ्यूर्, which is liable to confusion with another chyūr^{u} छ्यूर्, the regular 1 p.p. of the verb chīrun छीरुन्, qq.v.

Hence, if a word commencing with cĕ, cy, chĕ, or chy is not found in this Dictionary, it should be looked up under ca, c, cha, or ch, and vice versa respectively. Important words which have been noted as actually occurring in literature under both forms are as a rule given under both, with appropriate cross-references, each in alphabetical order; but it will be understood that it would be impossible to give every word commencing with c or ch twice over, in its two different spellings.

cāī (K.Pr. chāī), i.q. cāh^{i}, q.v.

cĕ च्य in cĕ cĕ च्य च्य, see cyon^{u}.

cāhas gaṣhun चाहस् गछुन् । गर्ते निपातः m.inf. to go into a pit; hence, to fall into or commit an unworthy action.

cāh[i] चाह्, cahy चाह्य्, or cāy चाय् (also spelt cyāh[i] च्याह्, cyāy च्याय्), f. tea (K.Pr. 39, Gr.M.). According to El. two kinds of tea are sold in Kashmīr—Suratī and Sabz. Suratī tea is like English tea, and Sabz tea is brick tea imported via Ladāk and the Panjāb. There are two ways of preparing tea in Kashmīr. For mugal cāh[i], five cups of water are poured upon a tōlā of tea. It is then boiled for half an hour, when more cold water is added, along with condiments and sugar, after which it is boiled for half an hour more. Milk is then added. It is now ready for drinking. The colour is reddish. The second mode of preparing tea is called shīr^{i} cāh^{i}. The tea is placed in the teapot with a little soda and water and boiled for half an hour. Milk, salt, and butter are then added, after which it is boiled for another half-hour, when it is ready for drinking. According to K.Pr. (l.c.) the salt used in the infusion of tea is called phul. It is found in the Nubra valley in Ladāk, and contains the carbonate and sulphate of soda and a little of the chloride of sodium. cāh^{i} karün^{ü}, f.inf. to make tea (El.).

cāhi-kosh^{u} चाहि-कंशु । निःसारचव्यम् m. tea-leaves which have been infused, 'tea-leaves.' -nör^{ü} -नॉर्ू । चव्यपात्रविशेषः f. a teapot (with a spout like the English vessel), the vessel in which tea is placed after it has been made (El.).

cāhyāh चाह्याह् or cyāhyāh च्याह्याह् f. a cup of tea, tea (the infused liquid) (Śiv. 1824). This is cāh^{i} with suff. of indef. art., lit. 'a tea'.

chŏ̃ch छाँच्ह् । फलविशेषः f. a bramble; a raspberry, Rubus niveus (L. 73, El.). This word is often spelt chänch or cānc.

chaḍun छडुन् । परित्यागः conj. 1 (1 p.p. choḍ^{u} छंडु, f. chüḍ^{u} छंडू, f.pl. chajĕ छज्य; 2 p.p. chajyōv छज्योव्), to release, let go, dismiss (e.g. a man or beast from confinement or from work in which he of it is engaged). choḍ^{u}-mot^{u} छंडु-मंतु (f.sg. chüḍ^{u}-müṣ^{u} छंडू-मंचू, pl. chajĕ-maṣa छज्य-मञ्), perf. part. released, etc.

chag छग् or chĕg छग्। पलायनस्वरा f. sudden dispersal, rout, as when a crowd is suddenly attacked and scatters, or when a flock of birds rises and flies away on the approach of a human being (Śiv. 1860). —diñ^{u} —दिञ्ू । निवारणा f.inf. to scatter, disperse, drive away, as ab. —lāgüñ^{ü} —लगंञ्ू । निवारणाप्तिः f.inf. to be dispersed, scattered, driven away, routed, as ab. —ṣānüñ^{ü} —षानंञ्ू । पलायनस्वरोत्पादनम् f.inf. to cause an assembly or a flock to suddenly scatter, as ab.

chāg^{u}r^{ü} छॉग्ू । संभ्रमः f. hurry, flurry in doing anything (so as to get it done before anyone comes or something happens).

chĕh छ्ह्, chih 1 छिह्, see chuh.

chih 2 छिह् । ईषदाघातः f. (sg. dat. chish^{ü} छिशू), a slight accidental blow (esp. of something hard) on the edge or point of anything, a knock.

chīh 2 छीह् f. a very small amount of anything, as in aṣh^{ĕ}ka chīh, a very little love (H. vii, 30).

chuh 1 छुह्, vb. subst. This verb is defective, being only used in the present tense and rarely in the imperative; it is participial in form, being liable to change for gender. Its forms are m.sg. 1 chus छुस्, 2 chukh छुख्, 3 chuh छुह्; pl. 1 chih छिह्, 2 chiwa छिव (chiv छिव्, m.c. in H. vii, 9), 3 chih छिह्; f.sg. 1 chĕs छ्यस्, 2 chĕkh छ्यख्, 3 chĕh छ्यह्; pl. 1 chĕh छ्यह्, 2 chĕwa छ्यव, 3 chĕh छ्यह्. The final h of the forms chuh, chih, and chĕh is added only to aid pronunciation, and is dropped before all suffixes, as in chu-na छुन, he is not, chĕm छ्यम्, she is to me. When a suffix commences with a vowel the u of chuh becomes w, and the i and ĕ of chih and chĕh become y. Thus, chuh + ā becomes chwā छ्वा, is he? and chih + ā and chĕh + ā both become chyā छ्या, are they (m.)? is she? or are they (f.)?

In H. vii, 9 a pres. cond. pl. 2 chiv छिव् occurs.

For the other tenses of the vb. subst. the vb. āsun (q.v.) is employed.

Chuh is also employed as an auxiliary verb, forming, with the pres. part., a present tense, as in suh chuh karān, he makes or is making, and, with the perf. part., a perfect tense, as in tām^{i} chuh kor^{u}-mot^{u}, he has made. In such cases verbal suffixes are added to the auxiliary verb and not to the participle. There is this peculiarity, that when this occurs the suffix of the agent case of the 2nd pers. sing. is generally y, not the th used with the past tense. Thus, tsĕ koru-th, thou madest, but tsĕ chu-y koru-mot, thou hast made.

As a vb. subst. chuh is very commonly used with a dative of possession, thus providing Kāshmīrī with a verb signifying 'to have'. Thus, mĕ chuh or (with suffix) chu-m, there is to me, i.e. I have.

Except as stated above in regard to the agent of the 2nd pers. sing., this verb takes the usual pronominal and adverbial suffixes. Thus, chus, I am; chus-ay, I am for thee; chukh, thou art; chukh-a, art thou? chuh-an (for chukh-an) karān, thou makest him; chuh-an-a karan, dost thou make him? chwā (chuh + ā), is he? chyā (chĕh + ā), is she? chu-na, he is not; chu-nā, is he not? chu-y, he is to thee, or he is verily; chu-y-ĕ, is he to thee; chu-s, he (or there) is to him; chi-s, they (m., or there) are to him; chĕ-na, she is not; chĕ-nā, is she not? chĕ-y, she is to thee, or she is verily; chĕ-y-ĕ, is she to thee? chĕ-s, she (or there or they, f.) is to him, and so on. In H. xii, 6, chiy is used instead of chuy, he is verily. Cf. Gr.Gr. 189 and Gr.M.

chuh 2 छुह् m. onomat. the noise made in driving a horse, tchk (H. xi, 8).

d द ɔ. The third consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet in the Roman character. It is the eighteenth (or, if we count ṣ, sh, and z, the twenty-first) consonant when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, and the twelfth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. It is pronounced as in India proper, with a sound much softer and more dental than the English d.

The Sanskrit aspirate dha ध does not exist as a pronounced sound in Kāshmīrī. When a Hindī or Sanskrit word containing this letter also occurs in Kāshmīrī, the dh ध is represented by d द. Thus, the Sanskrit dhanaṁ धनं, wealth, is represented in Kāshmīrī by dana दन. In the case of words borrowed directly from Sanskrit, the dh ध is often, but not always, retained in writing in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character. Thus, the Sanskrit Dharma-rāja धर्मराज, a name of the god Yama, appears in Kāshmīrī written in these characters both as धर्मराज़ and द्मर्राज़, but the pronunciation is always darmaraza.

In the present work, whether a word is spelt in the Nāgarī character with ध or with द, that letter will always be transliterated d, and hence words found in any native book spelt with ध should be looked up in the English order, under d. Thus धर्मराज़ will be found, in alphabetical order, under darma-rāza in the article darma. As a rule, spellings with ध will not be indicated in this Dictionary, even in the Nāgarī character. The principal exception to this rule will be found in the case of proper names, in which it is most usual to preserve the ध in native writing. Thus, the Sanskrit proper name Dharma-rāja धर्मराज will be shown in this Dictionary as darma-rāza द(ध)र्मराज़.

ḍ ड ɔ़. The fourth consonant in the Kāshmīrī alphabet in the Roman character. It is the thirteenth (or, if we count ṣ, sh, and z, the sixteenth) consonant when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, and the thirteenth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. It is the cerebral ḍ of India proper, and has no corresponding sound or character in Arabic or Persian, or, indeed, in any European language. It has something of the sound of the English d in 'drum', but is properly pronounced by turning back the tongue and pressing the under surface of the tip against the palate.

The Sanskrit aspirate ḍha ढ does not exist as a pronounced sound in Kāshmīrī. When a Hindī or Sanskrit word containing this letter also occurs in Kāshmīrī the ḍh ढ is represented by ḍ ड. Thus the Hindī ḍhēr ढेर, a heap, is represented in Kāshmīrī by ḍēr डेर.

In most Indo-Aryan vernaculars of the present day, including Hindī and Panjābī, ṛ ड़ ɔ़, when non-initial, is pronounced as a cerebral ṛ ड़ ɔ़. This cerebral ṛ ड़ ɔ़ does not occur in Kāshmīrī, the pronunciation as ḍ ड ɔ being generally retained, even when non-initial. Thus the Hindī baṛa बड़ा, great, is represented in Kāshmīrī by boḍᵘ बॅडु. Sometimes, however, an original ṛ ड़ becomes a simple dental r र in Kāshmīrī. Thus the Sanskrit biḍālaḥ विडालः, a cat, becomes brôrᵘ ब्रोर्, and the Hindī ghōṛā घोड़ा, a horse, is represented by gurᵘ गुर्. In the dialect of the Sindh Valley, and perhaps also elsewhere in Kashmīr, r र and ḍ ड are frequently interchanged. Thus, in a collection of Kāshmīrī folk-tales collected in the Sindh Valley by Sir Aurel Stein, the word for 'daughter' is not only the Śrīnagar kūrᵘ कूर्, but often, even on the same page, kūḍᵘ कूड्, and the word for 'to search' is both shāḍun शाडुन् and shārun शारुन्.

Occasionally we find ḍ ड optionally interchanging with a dental d द, as in ḍal डल् or dal दल्, a leaf.

This verb is very commonly used with a substantive to form a nominal compound verb. Such so-called compounds are often hardly compounds at all, each member retaining its own meaning, as in bāg dyunᵘ, to give a share, to divide; bal dyunᵘ, to give an offering, make a sacrificial offering. At other times the compound acquires a special meaning, as in ach^i dinᵘ, to apply the eye, hence, to cast the evil eye; ongul dyunᵘ, to apply the finger, hence, to tickle the throat so as to promote vomiting. Such compounds will be found under the various substantives which form the first member.

The verb dyunᵘ is often added to the conjunctive participle of another verb, without materially altering the latter's sense, as in barun or barith dyunᵘ, to fill.

F ف

The sound represented by this letter does not occur in Kāshmīrī, although the character is often met with in borrowed Persian words, written in the Perso-Arabic character. Except by Persian scholars, the character is usually pronounced ph, or, when initial, sometimes as p. When Persian words occurring in Kāshmīrī are written in the Śāradā or Roman character the letter ف is represented by ph फ्. Hence, for all words commencing with f ف, see under ph फ्.

G ग् گ

g ग् گ्. The sixth (or, if we count the aspirate ch as a separate letter, the seventh) consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet, the third consonant when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, and the twenty-ninth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. It has the sound of the letter g in the English 'game'.

The Sanskrit aspirate sonant gha घ does not exist as a pronounced sound in Kāshmīrī. When a Hindī or Sanskrit word containing this letter also occurs in Kāshmīrī, the gh घ् is represented by g ग्. Thus, the Hindī ghōṛā घोड़ा, a horse, is represented in Kāshmīrī by gur[u] गुर्. Some writers retain this gh घ् in writing. Thus, they write घर for gara गर, a house, on the analogy of the Hindī घर; but this custom is both useless and misleading. In the present work such words will always be spelt with g ग्, and hence words found in any native book spelt with घ् should be looked up in the English order under g ग्.

The character ग is named gagar-gö, and घ gös[i]-ga.

The letter غ sometimes occurring in words borrowed from Arabic or Persian is also represented in Kāshmīrī by g, like which it is pronounced. Thus غالب is pronounced gölib.

gī गी گي a sec. suff. forming abs. nouns, as in dātagī, generosity, from dāta, generous; zindagī, life, from zinda, living. It is derived from an older -ak-ī.

gashun 1 गशुन । युक्तीभवनम् conj. 2 (1 p.p. gosh[u] गशु Gr.Gr. 113, 235), to be proper, right, advisable (K.Pr. 100 guts for gosh[u], YZ. 191, Śiv. 1596, Rām. 19, 154, 1137); to be necessary (L.V. 19, 29, 45, K.Pr. 69, YZ 185, Śiv. 1705); to be wanted, desired (Śiv. 1240, 1448; Rām. 591, 658, 840; goshum, I want, YZ 463, Śiv. 1899; gashiy, thou desirest, Śiv. 633). This verb is employed either actively or passively with the fut. p.p. of another verb to indicate propriety, necessity, or desire. It is only employed in the present, in the fut. (genl. with pres. signification), or in the past tense. For the present, see Gr.Gr. 183. See also Gr.Gr. 113. Thus:—

A. Actively (Gr.M., Gr.Gr. 113):—ās[i] gashav rōzān[i], we are proper to be remained, i.e. we must remain; ās[i] gashav din[i], we must give; marun goshus-na, I do not wish to die (Śiv. 700); bharuth gashi rāza āsun[u], Bharata should become king (Rām. 155); kāh gashĕm-na ḍēshun[u], no one may see me (H. xii, 2).

B. Passively:—Here the personal subject (when expressed) is put either in the dative or the genitive.

(a) Person not expressed:—gashi muaph karun[u], pardon to be made is proper, please pardon (Gr.M.); jān gashi, good will be proper that, i.e. you had better (do so and so) (Gr.M.); gashi yish āsün[u], a desire is proper to be, one should wish (yish is f.) (Gr.M.); so Śiv. 75, 1448, 1713, 1752, 1753; Rām. 19, 154; H. v, 4; xii, 19, 20. In Rām. 1644 we find (1) the impersonal gashi mīṭh[i] din[i], it is proper that kisses should be given, and (2) personal gashan cĕn[i], drinkings are proper, one should sip.

(b) Person in the dat. (Gr.M., Gr.Gr. 113):—mĕ gashi, there is necessary to me, I want (Gr.M.); asĕ gashi rōzun[u], to us to remain is necessary, we must stay (Gr.M.); asĕ gashi phikir[u] thawün[u], we must take thought (Gr.M.); asĕ gashan nākāragiyĕ trāwañĕ, we must abandon evil actions (Gr.M.). So Śiv. 1448; Rām. 79, 150, etc.; H. xii, 4, 5, 10, 13, etc. For examples of the use of this verb with pronominal suffixes, see Gr.Gr. 183. In the present tense the person must be indicated by a suffix if it is in the 1st pers. sg. or 2nd pers. sg. or pl. In the 3rd pers the use of a suffix is optional. Thus tamis gashān chuh (or chus) zi parahö, to him it is desirable that I should read, he thinks it proper that I should read.

In other tenses when the person is the 2nd, the suffix of the dative of the pronoun must always be added to the verb, whether the full pronoun is expressed or not. Thus, yus tĕ gashiy, (the kind) which you want (Gr.M.); so Śiv. 707, 1224, 1705; H. xii, 7, 13.

(c) Person in the gen. This verb means, primarily, 'to go,' but is often used secondarily in the sense of 'being' or 'becoming'. It is hence one of the most frequently used verbs in the language.

To go, proceed (L.V. 19, 41; Śiv. 16, 53–5; Rām. 21, 109, 391, et passim); to go, go away, depart (L.V. 95, Rām. 52, 104, 211, 215, et passim); to go, to disappear (L.V. 9, Śiv. 1276, Rām. 219); to go, become absent, to die (Rām. 275, 367, 876); to go (to any place) (L.V. 36, Rām. 64, 166, 418); to go (into), to be put or to fall (into anything) (Śiv. 1210, Rām. 343); to go (of a letter in the post) (Gr.M.); to go (to a person or place), to reach (of news, etc.) (Śiv. 1225, Rām. 281, 508, 737, 1757); to march, start on the march (of an army) (Gr.M.); to go (to a certain condition, e.g. to joy, to become joyful (Śiv. 924; similarly, Śiv. 1642, 1739, 1760, Rām. 32); to go, lead (of a road) (Gr.M.); to go, elapse, pass (of time, etc.) (H. viii, 10; Śiv. 22, 706, 1704, 1717; Rām. 535, 787, 947, 1297); to go, be in motion (of the wind) (El.); to go, as we say of a worn-out garment, 'to go' (at the knees, etc.), cf. khŏn, khūrᵘ 1.

āshtsaras gatshun, to go to astonishment, to be surprised, filled with wonder (Rām. 567, 934); manas gōs, it went into his mind, he determined, made up his mind (to do so and so) (Rām. 557, 619, 623, 1012); reflected, considered (Rām. 1346, 1348); māra gatshun, to go to death, to meet a violent death (H. viii, 11; x, 7; Rām. 701, 868, 972); phikiri gatshun, to go into meditation, to meditate (Rām. 1368); pānas gatshun, to go for oneself, to go one's way without let or hindrance (H. iii, 8, etc.; Rām. 1375).

To be, become (L.V. 16, 59, etc.; K.Pr. 9, 103, 148; YZ. 47, 149, 463; Śiv. 3, 40, 68, 129, 1659, 1694; Rām. 10, 20, 298, 463, et passim); to happen, turn out, occur (W. 101; L.V. 81, 84, 85, 102; YZ. 22; H. ix, 1; Śiv. 912, 1454, 1843; Rām. 118, 277, 687); to come into existence (L.V. 100, Śiv. 983, Rām. 90).

sôruy samsār gav kuñĕ trāyĕ, the whole world became in one condition, i.e. everyone found himself in the same state of prosperity, there was neither rich nor poor (Śiv. 1239); chis kay gatshān, vomitings are happening to him, he is vomiting (Gr.M.); sītāyĕ gav gash, to Sītā fainting happened, she fainted (Rām. 396); kyāh gav, what happened? what is the matter? (YZ. 176, 269); kyāh gŏyᵘ, what happened to you? what is the matter with you? (Rām. 346, 347); sônas sartal gatshĕs, for gold base metal will become, gold will be turned into base metal (Rām. 682); shĕstᵃras sŏn gatshiy hösil, thine iron will be turned into gold (L.V. 100).

This verb is commonly used to form nominal compounds, as in önta gatshun, to go beyond the end, to be at the last extremity; atha g. to get out of hand, be insubordinate; bạḍᵃran gatshūñᵘ, increase to take place; bakawās gatshun, mutual abuse to occur; bul gatshūñᵘ, a mistake to occur. For these and many others see under the respective nouns. As further examples may be quoted gumān gatshun, supposition to occur (to a person), to suppose, conclude (Rām. 463, 1324); khŏli gatshun, to become void, to miss the mark (of a bullet) (Gr.M.); pŏda gatshun, to appear, become manifest (Rām. 319, 466, 1063, 1293); to be created, born, produced (Rām. 597); tabāh gatshun, to be wrecked (of a ship) (Gr.M.); mĕ chuna shĕkh gatshān, I have no suspicion (Gr.M.); gayĕ bŏn ta hyorᵘ, she was tossed up and down (Gr.M.).

In the second past, gauv or gav is often used as an equivalent of the present tense of the verb substantive, as in khŏsh gōs, I became pleased, i.e. I am pleased (Gr.M.); sēr gauv, it is late (Gr.M.), cf. gatshĕm sēr, I shall be late (Rām. 946); similarly Śiv. 59, 571, 604, 813, 821, 1545, 1660; Rām. 764, etc. In this sense it is frequently employed in definitions (cf. W. 140), as in karzdār gauv suy yus rupayĕ dārān āsi, a debtor is he who owes money (Gr.M.), similarly Śiv. 1226, 1227, 1553, 1556, 1758. In other connexions it means 'is by nature' (Śiv. 1287), or 'is the same as' (Śiv. 1448, 1449, 1753).

With the conj. part. of another verb, gatshun forms a so-called intens. comp., as in milith gatshun, to be exactly alike (Gr.M.), to become united (L.V. 11, etc.); mashith gatshun, to forget (L.V. 59), with dat. of subject, as in yina mashith gatshiy, (take care) that you do not forget (Gr.M.), and gen. of thing forgotten (Rām. 871); wuphith g., to fly away (Gr.M.). Similarly, chapith g., to hide oneself (Rām. 398); dazith g., to be burnt up (Rām. 1080, 1082); hĕth g. (Hindī lē jānā), to take away (Śiv. 705, Rām. 236, 402, 469, 601); to go with (a person), to take (a person) along with one (Rām. 297, 793); khasith g., to ascend, rise, arise (L.V. 27, Rām. 867, 886, 900, 1761); khĕth g. (H. khā jānā), to eat up; karith g., to make and finish (Śiv. 210); marith g., (Hindī mar jānā), to die (Śiv. 706, Rām. 264, 753, 1425, 1577); rūzith g., to be stopped, impeded (Rām. 1092); talith g. (H. calā jānā), to go away (Rām. 336, 1089, 1112, 1379); wuḍith g. (H. ur jānā), to fly away (Rām. 260); wasith g., to descend (Rām. 604, 1713, 1718, 1719); wŏthith g., to ascend, rise, arise (Rām. 1099, 1741).

h ह ऽ. The seventh (or, if we count the aspirate ch as a separate letter, the eighth) consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet in the Roman character. It is the thirty-third (or, if we count ṣ, sh, and z, the thirty-sixth) and last consonant in the Śāradā or Nāgarī alphabet, and the thirty-fourth and penultimate consonant in the Perso-Arabic alphabet as adapted to Kāshmīrī. It also represents the Arabic letter ح (the tenth letter in the Perso-Arabic alphabet) when occurring in Arabic words borrowed by Kāshmīrī. It is pronounced as an aspirate, as in India Proper. In schools it is named hāla hŏ हाल हॅ.

In Kāshmīrī words this character represents an original h, as in hot^{u} (Skt. hataḥ), smitten; dāh (Skt. dāhaḥ), burning. It also frequently represents an original sibilant. Thus, it represents ś in words such as ŏhī, a blessing (Skt. āśīḥ); bĕhi, he will sit down (Skt. upaviśati); dah, ten (Skt. daśa-); hihur, a father-in-law (Skt. śvaśura-), but hash, a mother-in-law (Skt. śvaśrū-); hūn^{u}, a dog (Skt. śun-); hīr, a head (Skt. śiraḥ); hat-, a hundred (Skt. śata-); wuh, twenty (Skt. viṃśati-). It represents ṣ in words such as bāha, steam (Skt. vāṣpa-); hār, N. of a month (Skt. āṣāḍha-); shĕh, six (Skt. ṣaṣ-); mahanyuv^{u}, for manahiv^{u}, a man (Skt. manuṣaḥ); vĕh, poison (Skt. viṣam). It represents s in words such as dŏh, a day (Skt. divasaḥ). It represents both original s and original ś in hyuh^{u} (i.e. hih^{u}), like (Skt. sadṛśaḥ, Pr. sarisō with the elision of medial r not uncommon in Dardic languages). If, in the process of declension or conjugation such an h is followed by u-mātrā or by ĕ (ya), the sibilant returns under the form of sh. Thus bāh, the twelfth lunar day (Skt. drādaśi), sg. dat. bŏsh^{ü}; pyuh^{u} (pih^{u}), ground to powder (Skt. √ piṣ), f.sg. pish^{ü}, pl. pishĕ; hyuh^{u}, like (see ab.), f.sg. hish^{ü}, pl. hishĕ; tŏh^{u}, astringent (? Skt. kaṣāyaḥ), f. tŏsh^{ü}.

The pronominal suffix kh, representing both the nom. of the pronoun of the 2nd pers. sg. and also any case of the pronoun of the 3rd pers. pl., becomes h when followed by another pronominal suffix. Thus, karān chu-kh, thou makest, karān chu-h-as, thou makest for him; koru-kh, they made him, kor^{u}-h-am, they made him for me (Gr.Gr. 181).

An initial h is sometimes dropped, as in atha, a hand (Skt. hasta-, Pr. hattha-); asun, to laugh (Skt. √ has-).

ha ह interj., i.q. hata 2, q.v., as in ha-biñ = hata-biñ (W. 100); ha-dĕd, for hata dĕdi (id.); used as an interjection between men, with a or i suffixed to the vocative, as in ha wazīra, O Vizier (H. xii, 19); ha mālī, O father (L.V. 107).

hā 1 हा interj. O, ho (L.V. 107; K.Pr. 43, 242, 250, W. 100; Śiv. 189, 1580, 1590, 1739; H. ii, 2, 4; Rām. 1040–1, 1795).

This interj. is generally used in calling a male person at a distance, or in sorrow (K.Pr. 261); with it ō is suffixed to the voc. case, as in hā nārānō, ho Nārāyaṇa; hā kākō, O father (nom. kākh)! (Gr.Gr. 97). In Śiv. 1308 ff. hā gŏsāñĕ, O Lord of Yōgīs! the ō is not suffixed; so H. ii, 3, etc. In Rām. 1040–1 an inan. m. object is addressed. Cf. hasa and hata 2.

hā 2 हा interj. alas for (so-and-so) (K. 801).

hai ह interj. O, addressed to a woman (K.Pr. 158; Śiv. 850, 941; Rām. 1103, 1106, 1454); a mere exclamation used by women in poetry (Śiv. 1104, 1131, 1358). -hai -ह, exclamation, alas! (Śiv. 87, 323). Cf. hāy 1. -hāy -हाय्, id. (Śiv. 536).

hau ह्यो, hav ह्यव् interj. an exclamatory pleon. suff. used in poetry, e.g. in H. ii, 10; an interj. used by a woman in addressing her husband (H. v, 4; xi, 11). Cf. hay 2.

hē ह्ये, interj. of respect, used by a man to a man, as in hē huzūr, sir; hē nārān, O Nārāyaṇa (L.V. 109; Śiv. 14, 155, et passim; Rām. 50, 51, etc.); the word juv or sŏ (or sa, Gr.M.) or both are often suffixed to the noun, but juv cannot be used with a word indicating caste. Thus hē nārān juv, hē nārān sŏ, hē nārān juv sŏ; hē gana kaul, O Gaṇa Kaul; hē rāma kaul sŏ, O Rāma Kaul. We cannot say hē gana kaul juv, because kaul is a caste-name. Cf. Gr.Gr. 96 and Gr.M. s.v. Gr.M. gives also forms such as hē sŏhib-a, hē sŏhib-a-sa, hē sŏhib . . . hasa, all meaning 'sir'. In Śiv. 507 (hē bawānī) the interj. is used in addressing a goddess.

hŏ ह्ऽ interj. an exclamatory pleon. suff. used in conversation, as in kyāh-hŏ, what? (H. v, 4).

hō होः interj. ho, used to male inferiors (W. 100); used to a king (Rām. 1446); lo! an expletive in poetry (Śiv. 1590, 1702, 1710, Rām. 679). -hō -होः interj. the crooning sound made to soothe a baby; -hō karun, to croon (to a baby) (Śiv. 1379).

huh ऊह् dem. that (within sight), this (at some distance, but within sight); both subst. and adj. It may be either an. or inan., and the an. forms are sometimes m., sometimes f., and sometimes c.g. Sing. nom. an. m. huh ऊह्; f. hŏh ऊह्; inan. huh ऊह्; dat. an. c.g. humis ऊमिस्; inan. huth ऊथ्; gen. an. c.g. hum¹-sond¹¹ ऊमि-संदु, or husond¹¹ ऊसंन्दु; inan. humyuk¹¹ ऊम्युकु; ag. an. m. hum¹ ऊमि; f. humi ऊमि; inan. hum¹ ऊमि; abl. an. c.g. and inan. humi ऊमि, or huwa ऊव; pl. nom. an. and inan. m. hum ऊम्; f. huma ऊम; dat. an. and inan. human ऊमन्; gen. an. and inan. human-hond¹¹ ऊमन्-हंन्दु, or huhond¹¹ ऊहंन्दु; ag. an. and inan. humau ऊमौ.

It will be observed that in the pl. there is no distinction between an. and inan., and that gender is only distinguished in the nom.

When used as an adjective, the only inan. form used is the dat. sg. huth, as in huth gāmas, to that village (Gr.M.). In other cases the animate forms only are used, agreeing in gender with the qualified noun, but in this case the f. sg. dat. is humi, not humis. Thus humis hūnis, to that dog (m.), but humi hŏ̃ñĕ, to that bitch.

When the adj. pronoun is in agreement with a noun in the gen. case the usual rule for adjectives is followed. When the word qualified is the genitive of a m. sg. an. noun, the pronoun is put in the dat. as in humis hūn¹-sond¹¹ of that dog. If the noun is m. inan. sg., the pron. is put in the abl., as in humi gāmuk¹¹, of that village. If the noun is f., either an. or inan., the pron. is put in the f.dat. (see ab.), as in humi hŏ̃ñĕ-hond¹¹, of that bitch; humi jāyĕ-hond¹¹, of that place. If the noun is plur., m. or f., an. or inan., the pron. is put in the dat. pl., as in human hŏ̃nĕn-hond¹¹, of those dogs; human hŏ̃ñĕn-hond¹¹, of those bitches; human gāman-hond¹¹, of those villages.

For the dat. sg. and subsequent cases, the various forms of the pron. ath are commonly used for huth, etc. See ath 1.

It will be noted that this pronoun can only be used for things within sight of the speaker, or for things referred to as close by. For things not in sight or not close by, tih must be used.

huti 2 ऊति । तत्सदृशेऽपि e.g. (for 1, see hut¹) emph., that very person or thing within sight; that person or thing within sight also.

hams 2 हंस् m. N. of a certain mantra, or mystic formula used by Śaiva Hindūs. It is said to be a representation of the Sanskrit words sŏ 'ham, written in reversed order as 'ham saḥ, meaning 'I am that', i.e. 'I am one with God', or 'God and I are one'. It is thus used as a name for the sacred syllable ōṁ, in its character of the anāhata śabda (in Kāshmīrī, anāhath, or anāhata, shĕbd) or unobstructed sound, also called the azapā (see anāhata-shĕbd and azapā) or unuttered word. It is described as being almost inarticulate, and as being really uttered only by the deity, indwelling in the breast of the worshipper, and therefore to have no human utterer or obstructer of its sound. It is often represented as being equivalent to the Supreme Himself (Śiv. 1011, 1027, 1064, 1687, 1693, 1783). When this mantra is mentioned, by a play of meanings, it is often capable of being translated by 'swan' (hams 1). Cf. hamsa-nād, bel.

hamsa-gad हंस-गद् m. i.q. -nād, bel. (Śiv. 1607). -gath -गथ् f. (sg. dat. -güṭ^{u} -गंठ्), the unobstructed path of this mantra, as explained ab. (L.V. 65). -nād -नाद् m. i.q. hams, ab. Owing to the play on the meaning of hams 1 mentioned ab., this formula is represented as having wings to bear the soul to the Supreme (Śiv. 897, 1516, 1827, 1891). Cf. JRAS., 1910, p. 1337.

hĕmsā हिंसा । जीवघात: f. slaughter, esp. slaughter of living creatures for food lawful to Kāshmīrī Hindūs; sin (generally) (Śiv. 897). —gatshün^{u} —गट्शुन् । अतिलोभोद्भव: f.inf. extreme rapacity to occur, of such a kind that it does not stop at robbing the powerless of their property or even the hungry of their food (Rām. 607).

allow to get too cold. hönˢrôwᵘ-motᵘ हाँस्रोउ-मतु। शीतलीकृतः perf. part. (f. hönˢröwᵘ-müsᵘ हाँस्रोवू-मंचू), (of food) allowed to get too cold, etc.

hapa 1 हप in hapa-dĕgulᵘ हप-डगुलु । विकृतमुखः, see hŏpa-dĕgulᵘ, s.v. hŏpa, and hŏpᵘ.

hapi हपि in hapi-hāyun हपि-हायुन् m. a famine, a scarcity (K.Pr. 76). The phrase is said to be connected with haph (q.v.), a corpse, and a conflation of hāwun, to show, and hyonᵘ, to take, and to express 'insufficient to give a corpse', i.e. less than nothing; but this explanation is very doubtful.

hŏpa ह्रप । उच्छ्वासितमुखः adj. e.g. possessing puffed out cheeks. -dĕgulᵘ -डगुलु or hapa-dĕgulᵘ हप-डगुलु । उच्छ्वसितगण्डः, विकृतमुखः adj. (f. -dĕgüjᵘ -डगंचू), having cheeks puffed out and globular like a cooking pot (see dĕgulᵘ); ugly and swollen-jowled. -lyolᵘ -ल्योलु । उखाकारमुखः adj. (f. -lĕjᵘ -ल्यंजू), id.

hŏpᵘ ह्रपु । मुखोच्छ्वासः m. swelling of the cheeks, a puffing out of the cheeks (from anger, etc.).

höph हाफ् حیف । धिक्कारः m. (sg. dat. höphas हाफस), an exclamation of regret; as interj. Ah! alas! what a pity! it is of no value! (K.Pr. 118).

haphta, hapta, hafta هفته, m. a week, se'ennight (K.Pr. 176).

höphiz 1 حافظ m. a keeper, guardian, protector; the Preserver of all things (a name of the Deity); one who has the whole Qŏr'ān by heart; a blind man (so-called because such commonly know the Qŏr'ān by heart). (Cf. öl¹-höphiz).

höphiz 2 हाफिज़् । वेश्या f. a courtesan, prostitute, dancing girl, nautch-girl.

höphiza-nagma हाफिज़-नग्म । वेश्यातौर्यत्रिकम् m. a nautch, a dance by a nautch-girl accompanied by a chorus of singers and instrumental music.

hopal (? spelling), a certain wild food-plant, Dipsacus inermis (L. 72).

hapun हपुन् । खिन्नीभवनम् conj. 3 (2 p.p. hapyōv हप्योव्), (from haph, a corpse), to become exhausted or worn out by delay (e.g. when anxiously expecting the completion of some work being performed by another, which is greatly delayed, or by hunger when there is great delay in the service of food).

hapyō-motᵘ हप्यो-मतु । खिन्नीभूतः perf. part. (f. hapyō-müsᵘ हप्ये-मंचू), exhausted, worn out, as ab.

hàpiñ हपिञ्, see kana-hàpiñ, s.v. kan 1.

happa हप्प । बालगोलकविशेषः m. a child's ball (of wood coloured externally with polished lac).

hapĕr हपर् । मुखवीक्ष्यम् m. the ugliness of a swollen jowl. Cf. hapa 1 and hŏpa.

hupörⁱ ह्रपार्रि adv. in or from that direction (in sight), i.q. humi-pörⁱ, see huh (Gr.Gr. 160).

hŏpˢran ह्रप्रन् । अभिभवः f. (sg. dat. hŏpˢrünᵘ ह्रप्रंचू), defeat, being overcome (by violence, abuse, or the like) (of a person vigorously engaged in any work). Cf. hŏbˢran.

hŏpˢrun ह्रप्रुन् । अभिभवः conj. 1 (1 p.p. hŏpᵒrᵘ ह्रप्रुच्), to defeat, overcome (by violence, abuse, or the like) any person vigorously engaged in any work. Cf. hŏbˢrun.

hŏpᵒrᵘ-motᵘ ह्रप्रुच्-मतु । अभिभूतः perf. part. (f. hŏpᵘrᵘ-müsᵘ ह्रप्रुच्-मंचू), defeated, overcome, as ab.

hŏpˢrāwun ह्रप्रावुन् । अभिभवः conj. 1 (1 p.p. hŏpˢrôwᵘ ह्रप्रोउ), i.q. hŏpˢrun. Cf. hŏbˢrāwun.

hŏpˢrôwᵘ-motᵘ ह्रप्रोउ-मतु । अभिभूतः perf. part. (f. hŏpˢröwᵘ-müsᵘ ह्रप्रोवू-मंचू), i.q. hŏpᵒrᵘ-motᵘ, see hŏpˢrun.

hupöryumᵘ ह्रपार्युमु adj. (f. hupörimᵘ ह्रपार्रिमू), of or belonging to over there (within sight) (Gr.Gr. 151).

hapis (? spelling), the hop-plant, Humulus Lupulus (L. 330).

hāputh हापुथ् । भल्लः m. (sg. dat. hāpatas हापतस्. The f. is hāpüsᵘ हापंचू, a she-bear), a bear (L. 111, Ursus torquatus). According to El. there are in Kashmīr a black and a brown bear, the former large, and the latter more fierce (L. 111, 458; K.Pr. 57, 76, 92, 248; H. ii, 10 ff.; Rām. 862). -nāg -नाग् m. the bear spring, N. of a spring in the Lĕdorᵘ Valley. Near to it is a copper mine which was worked in former days (El.). Cf. RT.Tr. iv, 617. We should expect this word to be spelt hāpath-nāg, but El. has hāput-, i.e. hāputh.

hāpath-baca हापथ्-बच । भल्लपोतकः m. a bear-cub. -carb -चर्ब् । भल्लमेदः m. bear's grease, the fat round the entrails of a bear, used as a medicine for rheumatism, etc. -māy -माय् । भल्लप्रतिजागरा f. a bear's watching, a bear's keeping ambush for an opportunity of springing on a hunter; met. waiting for an opportunity to fall upon and crush another person. -ṭang -टंग् m. N. of a kind of pear (El.). -tam -त्रम् । भल्लचर्म f. bearskin. -yārᵃz -यारज़् । भल्लमैत्री, मूढमैत्री, हानिजनकमैत्री f. a bear friendship (see bel.); hence, stupid friendship, friendship that does harm. The original meaning is a reference to a well-known story, told as follows in K.Pr. 77 :— 'a bear formed friendship with a man who was passing through his jungle. For some time he brought his friend large quantities of honey. One day the man fell asleep after eating the honey. While asleep a bee attracted by the sweetness alighted upon his mouth. The friendly bear seeing this thought that he would save the man from the pain of a sting, and so he went and fetched a large piece of rock and aimed it with all his might at the place where the bee was. The stone frightened away the bee, but killed the man' (W. 21, L. 111).

hāpathgī हापथ्गी । भापद्वृत्तिः f. the conduct of a bear (fierce, pugnacious, and savage); (with reference to a human being) conduct like that of a bear.

hāpüṭᵘ हापंटू । भापदी f. of hāputh, q.v. a she-bear.

har 1 हर् m. [in Śiv. 1132, 1617, 1776 (hara-y), the nom. sing. is hara हर m.c.; the voc. hara हर is very common, e.g. Śiv. 127, 161, 287, 313, etc.], N. of the Hindū god Śiva, so called (Śiv. 233) because he is said to be the destroyer (Sanskrit hara) of sin, sorrow, misfortune, and stumbling-blocks (L.V. 78–9, 98; Śiv. 254, 1039, 1061, 1076, 1173, 1181, 1197, 1402). husyōrī ह्वस्योरी, see hushyōrī.

hata 2 हत, interj. used by a Hindū woman when addressing her husband, when she is alone with him, and she is near by. She does not mention his name, but merely uses the interjection (Gr.Gr. 100); cf. hatōv, bel.

hatā हता interj. hallo!, used in addressing male juniors or inferiors, usually with ā added to the obl. form of the noun, as in hatā gulyā, ho Gul^{u} (Gr.Gr. 97, W. 100); hatā juwā, hie, Sir (K.Pr. 80).

hatau हतौ interj. used, like hatabā bel. by women, with various suffixes added to the noun. Thus, hatau — au or hatau — a, used when addressing familiars or juniors (male or female), as hatau kākau, O father (kākh); hatau himath kaulau, O Himat Kaul; hatau gana, O Gana. hatau — a bāyau, used when addressing men or women by their proper names only, as hatau mahādēva bāyau, O Mahādēv (Gr.Gr. 99).

hatō हतो interj. used by a man in sorrow or in addressing a person at a distance, ō or au being suffixed to the obl. case of the noun, as in hatō paryō, hallo Por^{u} (Gr.Gr. 98; W. 100; Śiv. 553, 588; H. x, 5; Rām. 1375).

hata-bā हतबा interj. used (like hatau, ab.) by a woman in addressing a man or woman (W. 100) with various suffixes attached to the noun, as follows: hatabā—bā, used when addressing a man or woman respectfully; especially when addressing a priest, as in hatabā himath-bā, O Himat. hatabā—au, when addressing familiars or juniors (male or female), as hatabā kākau, O father (kākh). hatabā—a, id. as hatabā kāka. hatabā—a bāyĕ or hatabā —a bayau, used in addressing a man by proper name only, as hatabā mahādēva bāyĕ or hatabā mahādēva bāyau, O Mahādēva (Gr.Gr. 99). hatabāhē हत-बाहे interj. used by a man in addressing an elderly priest, a person of the middle class, or servant, bā being suffixed to the noun, as in hatabāhē zanabā, O Zana (Gr.Gr. 97).

hata-biñ हत-बिञ् interj. used when a man addresses a woman (W. 100); möj^{ü} is suffixed if she is older than the speaker, as in hatabiñ pārvath möj^{ü}, O mother Pārvat; biñ is suffixed if she is of moderate age, or of an age equal to that of the speaker, as in hatabiñ Saraswath biñ, O sister Saraswat. It is not used in other cases (Gr.Gr. 98).

hata-dĕdi हत-दॅदि (K.Pr. 80) or -möj^{ü} -मोंजू interj. used by a man when addressing an older woman, möj^{ü} being suffixed to the noun, as in hatamöj^{ü} pārvath möj^{ü}, O mother Pārvat (Gr.Gr. 98). -sa -स (H. x, 5) or -sö -सो interj. used in addressing equals, male or female (W. 100). -söhē -सोहे interj. used by a man addressing a man respectfully. If the caste of the person addressed is not mentioned, then juv or sö or both must be suffixed to it. Thus, hatasöhē rāma kaul, O Rām Kaul ('Kaul' being the name of a caste); hatasöhē nārān-juv (or nārān-juv-sö), O Nārāyan; hatasöhē gana-sö, O Gana. Sö may also be added to a caste-name, as in hatasöhē rāma kaul-sö. If bā is suffixed, it indicates that the person addressed is older, and is a priest, a person of the middle class or a servant, as in hatasöhē sahaz-bā, O Sahaz; cf. hatabāhē, ab. (Gr.Gr. 96, 97).

hatōv हतोव् interj. used by women in addressing a man or woman at a distance, au being suffixed to the obl. case of the noun, as in hatōv manasā rāmau, hallo Manasā Rām. It is also used by Musalmān women in addressing their husbands. Thus hatōv ködirau, O Kādir. Hindū women use hata, ab., and do not mention the husband's name (Gr.Gr. 100).

hatay हतय् (El. hatai) or hatöy हतोय् interj. used by men in addressing female juniors or inferiors, y being suffixed to the obl. case of the noun, as in hatay (or hatöy) watshariy, O female child (watshür^{ü}) (Gr.Gr. 99) (W. 100, hatāi, hatoi). In H. xii, 16, it is used by a mother addressing her daughter.

hăt^{i} ह्वति card. the form which hath, a hundred (q.v.) takes in multiplication as in kāh hăt^{i}, eleven times a hundred. It can only be used with numerals above ten. We cannot say sōr hăt^{i}, four times a hundred, but must say hath sākh, a hundred times four (Gr.Gr. 86).

hĕt^{i} ह्वति, see hyon^{u} and hyot^{u}.

hōṭā होटा interj. of respectful address, O! (L.V. 17).

hŏṭ^{u} ह्वतु, 1 p.p. of hŏtsun (f. hŏts^{ü} ह्वतू), gone bad, decayed, tainted (Gr.Gr. 212; K.Pr. 12, 177, 247). Cf. aḍa-hŏṭ^{u}, p. 11*a*, l. 30.

hyoch[u] ह्योछ्, see hŏchun.

hyuḍ[u] ह्युड्, see hyur[u] 2.

hyuh[u] ह्युह् । उपम: adj. (f. hish[u] ह्युश्), like, closely resembling, exactly like (L.V. 10, 77, 109; K.Pr. 212); (of things compared) all alike, resembling each other (Śiv. 901). The object with which comparison is made is put in the nom. or in the dat. or, occasionally, in the gen. A good example of the use of the genitive is the phrase cyôn[u] hyuh[u]. Here if we look upon cyôn[u] as the nom. of the possessive pron. 'thy', the words mean 'like thine' (so Śiv. 1696); but if we look upon it as the gen. of t[u]h, thou, they mean 'like thee' (so Rām. 810).

Hyuh[u] is very commonly used with pron. adjs. of manner, thus,— yuth[u] hyuh[u], this kind of (Śiv. 1207); f. yish[u] hish[u] (Śiv. 1728, Rām. 359); tyuth[u] hyuh[u], of that kind (Rām. 1000); kyuth[u] h., of what kind? (Śiv. 780, Rām. 1074); similarly kus h., what sort of? (Gr.M.).

As examples of the word governing the nom., we have, e.g. an hyuh[u], like food (Śiv. 1229); ara h., like a saw (Śiv. 1776); gŏsôñ[u] h., like a mendicant devotee (Śiv. 825); lūkan-hond[u] (nom. of gen.) h., like (the conduct) of people (Śiv. 1799); pampōsh h., like a lotus (Śiv. 813, 1536); prān h. (value) like (your) life (Śiv. 1547); sūrĕ h., like the sun (Śiv. 98, 346, 740, 1586); yinsān h., like a man (H. x, 7); yār h. (treat) like a friend (Śiv. 1687).

There is a slight difference in meaning when governing the dat. Thus,— môl[u] (nom.) hyuh[u], (he is) like a father (to him); but mölis (dat.) hyuh[u], (the son is) like the father (Gr.Gr. 94). Other examples of the use with the dat. are:— (a) with pronouns, tĕ hyuh[u], like thee (Śiv. 472, 1344, 1540; Rām. 933); tas h., like him (Śiv. 35, 997, 1366; Rām. 1116); tath h., like that (thing) (H. xii, 4); kath h., like what? (Śiv. 901).

(b) With nouns subst. cyönis garas hyuh[u], like thy house (Gr.M.); hūñĕ h., like a bitch (K.Pr. 7); larĕ h., like a house (or houses) (Śiv. 1330); lālas h., like a ruby (H. xii, 4); rāzabāyĕ h., like a queen (or queens) (Śiv. 1237); sīmābas h., like quicksilver (Śiv. 1464); ṭhūlas h., like an egg, oval (Gr.M.).

With words indicating comparative age, hyuh[u] indicates the comparison. Thus,— buḍ[u] hyuh[u] an'zĕn, you must bring whoever among them is old, not 'bring him like an old man' (Gr.Gr. 94); kŏsa hyuh[u], the youngest (among a number) (YZ. 418); lŏkuṭ[u] h., id. (H. xii, 1); zyuṭh[u] h., the elder (of two princes) (H. viii, 5; similarly, Rām. 699, 859).

Hyuhᵘ, like the Hindī sā, often has simply an intensive force, and in this use sometimes gives an idiomatic meaning to the compound, as in alsēṭh-hyuhᵘ, very fat; hence, a fat fool.

Other examples (by no means pretending to be complete) of various idiomatic uses of this word are,—dôdᵘ hyuhᵘ, something like a pain, a sort of pain (Gr.M.); kunu-y hyuhᵘ, exactly alike; shālĕn byôlᵘ chuh hyuhuy, (one) shôlᵘ seed is exactly like (another), lit. 'for shôlus the seed is exactly similar' (K.Pr. 193, spelt hihût). hyuhᵘ samakhun ह्युह समखुन् । यथेष्टलाभः m.inf. like (what one wanted) to become visible, just what one desired to be obtained.

Cf. hyuvᵘ, which is used with the same meaning, and in exactly the same way as hyuhᵘ.

hayāh ह्याह or hayā ह्या । गौरवम् m. shame, sense of shame, modesty; shyness, bashfulness (K.Pr. 29); modest respect shown to an elder, etc., respectful obedience. —gashun —गछुन् । गौरवापातः m.inf. modest respect to occur, respect to be shown to the wishes of an elder or the like (whether voluntary or involuntary); discouragement to be felt (Gr.M.). —karun —करुन् । भीत्यनुवृत्तिधारणम् m.inf. to make respectful obedience, punctiliously and modestly to carry out the wishes of an elder, etc. -vĕtsar -वत्सर् । गौरवशीलता m. habitual respect shown to the wishes of an elder, etc. -yyotᵘ -य्योतु । सच्छीलः adj. to plunder; to take, imprison, capture (a person) (Śiv. 1004, 1341; Rām. 361); to buy (L.V. 89, K. 178), also mŏlⁱ hyonᵘ (e.g. K.Pr. 234); to accept (Śiv. 687); to take (good and bad treatment with equal indifference), to bear all things with equanimity; to take (a blow or an insult) lying down, to be poor spirited; to take, receive (a beating, or the like) (K.Pr. 59); to assume, wear (clothes, or the like) (Rām. 345, 1457); to take or assume (a character) (e.g. in a play) (Śiv. 1705); to take (a disease), be attacked (by sickness); to hold, retain, keep (Rām. 56); to adopt (a course of conduct, or of thought) (Śiv. 1754, 1858); to take (as a helper), to take refuge with (Śiv. 1164, 1178); to carry (Śiv. 1149, 1150, 1159, 1211, 1494, 1504, 1665, 1729; Rām. 81, 236, 305, 584, 603, 644, 676, 890, 900, 1394); to carry (news, a message, or the like) (Rām. 560, 800, 832, 928 1780); to bring, fetch (L. 460, YZ. 242); to carry (a child, etc., in one's arms, etc.) (Śiv. 1357–8, 1381, 1385, 1401, 1542; Rām. 1286; kŏchhĕ, in the bosom, (Śiv. 377, Rām. 1522); to hold, carry (in the hand) (Śiv. 214, 392, 801, 855, 860, 1093, 1400; Rām. 121, 389, 821, 1308); to carry, draw (a sword) (Rām. 648, 903); to carry (a weapon with the object of attack) (Rām. 431, 1096, 1312); to seize (of fire or flames seizing something) (Śiv. 68, 92, 118; Rām. 103, 849, 1014, 1169, 1561, 1578, 1613); to begin (see .bel.). hyonᵘ-dyunᵘ ह्यॅनु-द्युनु m.inf. to take and give, reciprocal giving and taking (Śiv. 1832; Rām. 1440, 1744).

In the sense of beginning hyonᵘ is used with the inf. or fut. pass. part. of another verb, which agrees in gender with the object (if any). Thus, suh karun hĕwān chuh, he takes the act of doing, i.e. he begins to do; suh chuh khath lēkhunᵘ hĕwān, he takes the letter to be written, i.e. he begins to write it; suh chuh zanāna mārüñᵘ hĕwān, he takes the woman to be beaten, he begins to beat her. In this sense, hyonᵘ is most often used in the past tenses, and being a transitive verb, then itself agrees with the object (if any) in gender and number, the subject being put in the case of the agent. Thus, parun hyotun, he began to read; tămⁱ chuh khath lēkhunᵘ hyotᵘmotᵘ, he has begun to write the letter, lit. by him the letter to be written has been taken; tămⁱ chĕh zanāna mārüñᵘ hĕtᵘ-mütᵘ, he has begun to beat the woman, lit. by him the woman to be beaten has been taken (Gr.Gr. 116). But other tenses also of hyonᵘ are used in this sense, although not so frequently. Thus:—

Impve. Śiv. 540, 941, 1301, 1770 (all masc.). Fut. (masc.) Śiv. 1190, 1193, 1195, 1202, 1720; Rām. 23, 718, 719, 1773; fem. karüñᵘ hĕn būlⁱ, they will begin to chirp (Śiv. 1721).

The past tenses naturally appear in various forms. Thus:— hyotᵘ, subject not expressed, Śiv. 1197, 1327; subject in agent case, Śiv. 1118, 1200, 1223, 1300; Rām. 170, 239 (timau wanunᵘ hyotᵘ), 709 (Lakshmanan grazunᵘ hyotᵘ), 1333, 1636.

With suffixes of agent case, hyotum lāyun nādāh, I began to utter a call (Rām. 1720); hyotum natsun, I began to dance (L.V. 94); wuchun hyotᵘmas, I began to look at it (L.V. 48); hyotun, he or she began, YZ. 249; Śiv. 1233, 1707; Rām. 336 (she began), 654 (pariyĕ hyotun samāna trāwun, the fairy began to cast off her ornaments), 1178, 1755; wanunᵘ hyotᵘnas, he or she began to say to him or her (YZ. 249, 389); wanunᵘ hyotᵘnakh, he or she began to say to them (YZ. 215, Rām. 270); hyotᵘnakh prān nērun, their life began to depart (Rām. 1333); hyotukh banāwun, they began to make (Śiv. 960); hyotukh pakun, they began to march (H. x, 1); hyotᵘhas wanāwun, they began to sing his praises (Śiv. 960); hĕtin vih-hihⁱ hāwānⁱ, she began to show airs and graces (Rām. 332); hĕtikh tāj sārānⁱ, they began to collect the crowns (Rām. 1462).

The suff. is even used when the main verb is intransitive, and when, therefore, it cannot refer to the subject. Its presence here is, in fact, logically indefensible, and is due to false analogy with the construction with transitive verbs. Thus, chĕtānⁱ hĕtin kēsh, hairs began to grow white (Śiv. 1704); hĕtᵘnas yiñᵘ nĕndᵃr, sleep began to come to him (H. v, 6).

This verb is often used in nominal compounds such as:— and hyonᵘ, to take the end, go through a thing from beginning to end (Śiv. 120) (conj. part. and hĕth, throughout, Śiv. 1206); apozᵘ hyonᵘ nŏvⁱ, to take untruth on the voice, to speak untruly (Rām. 1056); awatār h., to take an incarnation, become incarnate (Śiv. 1384); bôrᵘ h., to take the burden, accept responsibility (Rām. 134); dāg h., to become branded (Rām. 203, 387, 643, 1713, 1718); dŏg h., to take a beating, to be drubbed (K.Pr. 59); danḍa h., to take in compensation (H. v, 11); gam h., to suffer woe, be full of sorrow (Rām. 1655); gāsa h., to carry grass in token of submission, as if

to say 'I am thy cow', Rām. 96; hĕs h., to seize the mind, compel attention (Śiv. 25); to captivate the senses (Śiv. 1453); lādan hĕñᵘ, to accept a favour (Rām. 1439); jān hyonᵘ, to take life, to kill (Śiv. 130, 680; Rām. 67, 310, 492, 913); khūn h., to kill, to murder (Rām. 814, 837, 1075); khabar hĕñᵘ, to carry news (Rām. 560); kala hyonᵘ, to hold the head, to fondle (Rām. 269, 1129); to cut off the head, behead (Śiv. 739); kirāyĕ h., to take on lease (Gr.M.); mŏlᵘ hyonᵘ, to buy (H. x, 14; K.Pr. 234; YZ. 120, 157, 161, 169, 191, 242, 268); mŏshᵉkh h., to smell (Gr.M., Rām. 617); nāv h., to take a person's name, to utter it with reverence (Rām. 271); pānas h., to takeᵛ upon oneself, take responsibility for (Rām. 134, 502); prān h., to take life, to kill (Śiv. 1387, Rām. 1238); path h., to take a back seat, be defeated, be overcome (Śiv. 1237, 1246); to refrain from (Śiv. 1843); rukhsath h., to take permission to depart, to take leave (Śiv. 694, 1167; H. xii, 10, 13; Rām. 1180, 1183, 1678); rath h., to take blood, to kill, murder (Rām. 1240); samāgam h., to take a meeting, to meet; hĕth samāgam, having met, and also (with double meaning, see hĕth 2 and hyotᵘ 1) a friendly meeting (Śiv. 1848); shāl hĕñᵘ, to take a leap (Rām. 561, 886); shapᵘ hĕnᵘ, to take bites, to bite (H. x, 7, of a snake); wath hĕñᵘ, to take the road, to go forth (Rām. 680, 1598); yād h., to keep in memory, remember (H. xii, 17); zāg hĕñᵘ, to wait for, expect (Śiv. 272, 1382); zima hyonᵘ, to accept responsibility, admit (H. xii, 15); zanm h., to take birth, be born (Śiv. 34); zĕvi h., to take upon the tongue, to mention, to name, to mention so-and-so's name (K. 675, 1055); zuv h., to take life, to kill (L.V. 54; Rām. 810, 858).

j ज् ट्. The eighth consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet in the Roman character. It is also the eighth consonant when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, and is the seventh consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. It is pronounced, as in India proper, something like an English j, but is rather more dental, i.é. the place of contact between the tongue and the palate is slightly nearer the teeth than is the case in English. In schools, its name is zây[1] zö ज़ि ज़ो.

The Sanskrit aspirate jha झ does not exist as a pronounced sound in Kāshmīrī. When a Hindī or Sanskrit word containing this letter also occurs in Kāshmīrī, the jh झ is, subject to the remarks below, represented by j ज्. Thus, the Hindī jhamak झमक, brilliancy, is represented in Kāshmīrī by jamak(h) जमख्. Sometimes the jh झ is retained in writing. Thus, in El., the word jan, a clang, is written jhan, as in Hindī, but this in no way affects the pronunciation. In the present work j will always be written, and jh never, in transliterating Kāshmīrī words, even when an affected purism induces a scribe to write झ in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character. It must, however, be remarked that, so far as the present writer's experience is concerned, he has never come across any instance of the use of this letter, even in the case of borrowed words.

As already remarked, the Kāshmīrī j ज् is rather more dental than the corresponding English letter. This makes it easy to change it into the dental sonant sibilant z ज़्, and the change is very common, although, so far as the present writer has been able to ascertain, subject to no definite rule. Sometimes the two letters are optionally interchangeable, as in the case of the Persian word juzw جزو, a quire, which, when borrowed by Kāshmīrī, takes the form juz[a]wa जुज़्व or juj[a]wa जुज्व. At other times the use of j ज् or z ज़् indicates variant meanings of the same word, as in the case of juv जुव्, a suffix of respect, and zuv ज़ुव्, life, both of[1] which native authorities connect with the Sanskrit word jīva- जीव-. As a rule, however, in words borrowed from other languages, such as Persian, which possess both j and z, the custom of the original language is followed, as in Persian jārī جاري, running, Kāshmīrī jörī जारी; Persian zabān زبان, language, Kāshmīrī zabān ज़बान्. There are, nevertheless, exceptions even to this, as in the case of juz[a]wa or juj[a]wa above mentioned, or in the case of the Persian ziyāda زیادہ more, which becomes jyāda ज्याद in Kāshmīrī. In pure Kāshmīrī words the nearest approach to a rule is that when an original j ज् is followed by y य् it is not changed to z ज़्. To Kāshmīrī ears every j ज् has a y-sound inherent in it, and it follows that many Kāshmīrīs, when writing their own language in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, put no dot under ज़् when it represents z, but, on the contrary, represent the j-sound by jy ज्य्. Others, again, make no distinction in writing between the two sounds, representing both by ज़्. There are thus three systems of writing this pair of sounds, viz. :—

j	ज्	ज्य्	ज़्
z	ज़्	ज़्	ज़्

The third system is that followed in this dictionary; but, as the second system is also in very general use, all important words will also be given with the spelling of that system, with cross-references to the spelling according to the third system. Thus, the word jörī जारी جاري, running, will be found in its proper place in alphabetical order; but, as the word is often written and pronounced jyörī ज्यारी, that word is also given in its proper place, with a cross-reference to jörī.

So strongly is the y-sound heard by Kāshmīrīs in the letter j ज्, that ja ज is usually pronounced jĕ ज्य, ya य following a consonant being always sounded as ĕ or yĕ (see article ĕ). Thus, the word jangul जंगुल्, a forest, is commonly written and pronounced jĕngul ज्यंगुल्, and the borrowed Arabic word jild جلد is pronounced by some jal[a]d जलद् and by others jĕl[a]d ज्यलद्. Conversely, an original jy ज्य् may be represented by j ज् or even z ज़्. Thus, the Sanskrit jyōtiṣa- ज्योतिष-, an astronomer, is represented in Kāshmīrī by jūtish जूतिष् or even zūtish ज़ूतिष्, as well as by jyūtish ज्यूतिष्, the former being the usual spelling, although the latter, from a Pandit's point of view, is etymologically more correct.

For words not found under jĕ or jy, see under ja or j, respectively. See article j.

As has already been said, the Sanskrit or Hindī jh झ is represented in Kāshmīrī by j ज. This j ज, like an original j ज, is also liable to be changed to z ज़. Thus, the Sanskrit budhyatē बुध्यते, Prakrit bujjhai बुज्झइ, is represented in Kāshmīrī by bōzi बोज़ि, he will hear.

It thus follows that, if a word beginning with jĕ or jy is not found in this dictionary, it should be looked up under ja or j respectively, and vice versa. Moreover, as j ज and z ज़ are sometimes interchangeable, if a word is not found under j it should be looked up under z, and vice versa.

k क ک. The ninth consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet in the Rōman character, the first when written in the Śāradā or the Nāgarī character, and the twenty-eighth when written in the Perso-Arabic character. Its Kāshmīrī name is kōv ka कोव् क. It is sounded like an English k, but without any trace of the aspiration which is often heard in English when that letter is uttered. It is also used to represent the sound of the Arabic q ق (qāf), which, in Kāshmīrī, occurs only in words borrowed directly or indirectly from that language. In such cases the q ق is usually pronounced as k in speaking Kāshmīrī. Some writers, however, represent it by kh.

The aspirate of k is kh ख ک़, which is the second consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet when written in the Śāradā or the Nāgarī character. Its Kāshmīrī name is khŏn[i] kha ख्नि ख. This aspirate kh is also used to represent the Arabic and Persian ḵẖ خ, which occurs only in words borrowed from those languages. In such cases, the ḵẖ خ is pronounced as the ordinary aspirated kh in speaking Kāshmīrī. Except in a few isolated words, such as ŏḍk[u], sour, when k is followed by ü-mātrā, by y, or by ĕ, it is changed to c. Thus, batuk[u], a duck, fem. bat[u]c[u]; √thak-, be weary, 2 p.p. thacyōv; nyuk[u], thin, nicĕr, thinness (Gr.Gr. 30; Gr.M., p. 23). Similarly, except in the case of a few isolated words, such as khũkh[u], speaking nasally, kh, when followed by any of these letters, becomes ch. Thus, hŏkh[u], dry, fem. hŏch[u]; √likh-, write, 2 p.p. lichyōv; tryukh[u], clever, trichĕr, cleverness (ib.).
